Cheerful Republicans
Earthquake, Not Joshua
Wonderful Old Lady
Food, Six Cents a Day

—By Arthur Brisbane—

DEMOCRATS ARE discussing candidates and possibilities of success, and Republicans, doubtless, listen and rub their hands cheerfully.

When the two most prominent Democratic candidates are League of Nations, men and wobblers on prohibition there is reason for Republican cheerfulness.

President Hoover will get the big dry vote, no matter how much his Democratic opponent may wobble, for everybody knows that the Democratic party is the wet party, whatever candidates may say.

Prof. Garstang, British archaeologist, announces positively that the collapse of Jericho's walls was due to a great earthquake, and Joshua's trumpet had nothing to do with it.

That, however, will not disturb the fundamentalists. They will say "All very well, but who MADE THE EARTHQUAKE?" And they will ask also, "Does not a blast explode after the foreman blows his whistle? May not Joshua's loud blast on his trumpet have been the signal for the earthquake?"

Always you are surprised by "the weaker sex," the Biblical lady driving a nail into the forehead of her people's enemy, the wonderful Roman wife, driving a dagger into her heart, saying "it does not hurt," that her husband might find courage to kill himself; Charlotte Corday finding Marat in his bath, ending him and the French revolution with the same blow, and all the others.

Now it is an American lady doctor, 84 years old. She has just flown from Hawaii to Newark, N. J., in seven days, by ship and plane.

Dr. Grace Murray, one of New York's first woman doctors, is the lady. She flew from San Francisco to Newark in a night and a day, and said, "Tired? Nonsense."

Warden Lawes has reduced the cost of feeding convicts in Sing Sing to less than 24 cents a day. It used to cost 26 cents. Nothing is charged for labor, cooking, serving, convicts attend to that. Sunday breakfast includes corn meal mush and syrup, two boiled eggs, an orange, bread and cocoa. Monday dinner, hamburg roast, mashed potatoes, canned peas, turnips, brown gravy, bread, coffee and rice pudding with raisins. And so on, through the week. Unsatisfactory food must be avoided, for convicts will not stand it.

Tulsa, Okla., reports a feeding cost that will amaze housekeepers even more than the Sing Sing figures. Ten thousand persons have been living in Tulsa, since November, on a charity ration costing SIX CENTS A DAY, PER PERSON, and the Tulsa Medical Society says their average health is better than the average among Tulsa's 150,000 inhabitants.

The unemployed, on charity, cannot be as fussy as the convict who feels that he has a sort of a job.

Tulsa's feeding includes skimmed milk, in powdered form, costing less than one cent a quart, and very nutritious.

Real estate men, gazing mournfully into empty space, might study the methods of John D. Rockefeller, Jr. His great building plan in New York city might jeopardize the enterprises of others, and that Mr. Rockefeller wishes to avoid.

Before his foundations were dug he had men looking for tenants, not next door, or 10 blocks away, but in Europe.

As a result he is building one great building for British tenants, another for French tenants and they have the backing of their governments, anxious to develop markets here.

The Rockefeller work will be done by Americans, including the mural paintings, very extensive. American artists will provide them.

Stalin denies that he is ill, or has sent for a German specialist, at the same time, sarcastically expressing his regret at disappointing some that would like to hear of his death.

Concerning two men in Europe, Stalin and Mussolini, the world asks "what would happen, if they died?"

Absolute opposites in their formulated theories, and exactly alike in methods of government, each holds up the nation that he rules. What would happen if they should vanish? No yawning grand duke could manage Russia, as it exists today.

What Italian could carry Italy along in Mussolini's path, or find a new way, outside of anarchy?

In Nice, a divorced man married a young woman, also divorced, and the bridegroom's first wife acted as matron of honor for wife number two.

To many, that will seem a step in the right direction, toward civilization, better than having wife number one wait outside the church, or mayor's office, with a shiny dagger.

To others it will seem a step

By GILBERT PARKER
International News Service Staff Correspondent

Honolulu, T. H., April 4 (INS).—Four Americans accused of having taken the law into their own hands to avenge a woman's honor were called before the bar of justice today.

The defendants, Mrs. Granville Fortescue, prominent socially on the mainland; her son-in-law, Lieut. Thomas H. Massie, young officer of the United States Navy, and two naval enlisted men, E. J. Lord and Albert S. Jones, stand charged of second degree murder in the lynching of Joseph Kahahawai.

With four others, Kahahawai, a half-caste, was charged with brutally attacking Mrs. Fortescue's daughter, Mrs. Thalia Massie. The five were tried, but the case ended with a hung jury. Kahahawai was shot to death Jan. 8. His body was found in Mrs. Fortescue's automobile as it speeded toward the ocean.

Police and naval guards were stationed to hold back the thousands crowded in the beautiful streets near the ancient "Hall of the Chiefs," where the case is on trial.

The interest of the curious ran almost as high in seeing Clarence Darrow, grizzled veteran who heads the defense, as it did in glimpsing the four accused Americans.

M'KNIGHT, 21 ARE SUED FOR $1,000,000

Banker's Wife and Others Are Alleged to Have Received "Dishonest" Loans

Acting as his own counsel, and after his fine had been paid, Edwin T. McKnight, president of the closed Medford Trust Co., today filed an appeal on findings of guilty in bank law violations in Middlesex court.

At the time he was making his appeal, specifications in a $1,000,000 civil suit against him and 21 other officers of the bank cited loans in staggering amounts that are sought in a Suffolk court bill in equity.

The appeal from the criminal charges will be presented to the Supreme Court.

Atty. Robert T. Bushnell, former district attorney of Middlesex County, special counsel for Bank Commissioner Arthur Guy, filed the specifications.

WIFE IS ACCUSED

Mrs. Frances M. McKnight, wife of the bank head, was named as the borrower on a dozen loans totalling $157,234.59 under the classifications of loans "of an illegal, dishonest and negligible nature."

Frankini Bros., Malden contractors, were named under the same headings as borrowers of $150,000; Martha Shapiro, Lillian R. Siegel and David R. Siegel in a total of $417,409.37; Ann Tregia, Frank Tegria and Tregia Realty Co., in the sum of $429,850.96. Some of the latter were on unsecured notes, the specifications said.

In a listing of 72 loans on security from shares of capital stock, McKnight was named the borrower of $6259.02 and his firm of Eaton & McKnight of $4187.63.

CHARGES ILLEGAL DIVIDENDS

Loans certified by McKnight, Lewis H. Lovering and Frank W. Lovering, members of the bank loan committee, were listed at $1,700,000. The specifications added that fees of 1 per cent were deducted from each loan.

Forty-seven loans were made from funds of the savings department on first mortgages in excess of the 60 per cent of the property value allowed by law, they said.

MRS. FOSDICK DIES WITH CHILDREN

Sister-in-Law of Rockefeller Pastor, Mentally Ill, Uses Gun in Triple Tragedy

Montclair, N. J., April 4 (INS)—Mrs. Raymond B. Fosdick, wife of a noted New York attorney, shot and killed her two children and herself in her home here today.

Mrs. Fosdick had been undergoing treatment for a nervous disorder. Fosdick was prostrated by the tragedy.

The children, Susan, 15, and Raymond B., Jr., 9, were home on Easter vacation. The girl had been attending a private school in Philadelphia and the boy was a student at Lake Placid, N. Y.

LEAVES WILL AND NOTE

They were asleep when their mother left her bedroom without awakening her husband, and found an old revolver. She went first to the bedroom of her daughter and shot her. Then she rushed to Raymond, Jr.'s, room and killed him. She killed herself as Fosdick rushed into the room.

He summoned Dr. Victor B. Seidler, family physician, who found all three dead and police were notified. A detective said Mrs. Fosdick left a note and a will but gave no reason for her act.

MARRIED IN 1910

Mrs. Fosdick was the former Winifred Finlay of Montclair. She and Fosdick were married in 1910.

Fosdick, a brother of the Rev. Harry Emerson Fosdick, is a former director of the General Education Board of the Rockefeller Foundation and at present is trustee of the foundation.

Recently John D. Rockefeller, Jr., built the Riverside Drive Baptist Church for Fosdick's clergyman brother. It cost well above $10,000,000.

Atty. Fosdick was assistant corporation counsel in New York city in 1908-1910, and later commissioner of accounts.

In 1916 he represented the secretary of war on the Mexican border. In 1917 and 1918 he was chairman of the commission on training camps. As special representative of the War Department in France in 1918 he served as civilian aid to Gen. Pershing.

Lindy Placed in Bay State on Baby Hunt

Col. Charles A. Lindbergh made a secret flight over Massachusetts waters yesterday seeking a contact with the kidnapers of his baby.

It is not known whether the contact, expected to have been made with a yacht, at sea, was completed. Apparently it was not.

The same waters—Buzzards Bay, Vineyard Sound and the open sea beyond them—were combed today by coast guard boats, believed to be under secret orders to find a small yacht, named Sally, or Sallie, or Neillie, having two men and two women aboard.

"Positive" identification of the pilot of the plane engaged in yesterday's search as Col. Lindbergh was made at two points in Massachusetts where the amphibian landed, on the island of Cuttyhunk, in Vineyard Sound, and at the Round Hill airport on the mainland at Dartmouth.

One of the three passengers in the plane was partially identified as Col. Lindbergh's legal adviser, Col. Henry S. Breckenridge.

Another was said to resemble John H. Curtis, the Norfolk negotiator.

CHECK BY COAST GUARD

Col. Lindbergh, Curtis and Rear Admiral Guy H. Burrage, another of the Norfolk negotiators, all were absent from their homes on a mysterious mission yesterday. Col. Lindbergh for the first time since the abduction of Charles A. Lindbergh, Jr., on March 1.

Coupled with the reported person search of the famous flyer sonal search of the famous flyer was the coast guard search today, lending further credence to the belief that the kidnapers are suspected by the private investigators to be on a boat off the Massachusetts coast.

The Boston Evening American learned today that the red Sikorsky amphibian which landed on Cuttyhunk island yesterday morning and remained for several hours while its crew of four made inquiries about a yacht, made a second landing in Massachusetts.

The ship dropped into the Round Hill airport on the estate of Col. Edward H. R. Green, son of the famous Hetty Green, at 2:30 yesterday afternoon.

LINDY AT CONTROLS

She took on a capacity load of gasoline. The attendant at the gasoline station said Col. Lindbergh, wearing a gray tweed suit, cap and goggles, was at the controls.

One of the men stepped out of the ship to pay for the gasoline and an attendant said the name "Breckenridge" was on his wallet.

Mrs. Paul St. Lawrence, of New Bedford, who was at the Round Hill field while the plane was there, said she was positive Lindbergh was its pilot.

BALTIMOREAN SAYS HE HAS CONTACTED 3 TIMES

BULLETIN

London, April 4 (AP)—Maj. Charles H. Schoeffel of the New Jersey State police, who came here in connection with the investigation of the kidnaping of Charles Augustus Lindbergh, Jr., visited Scotland Yard today and conferred with high police officials.

Maj. Schoeffel's conference was short. He left in a taxi and it was said his next visit would be to Glasgow, the home of the mother of Betty Gow, the Lindbergh nurse.

Baltimore, April 4 (INS)—A Baltimorean has entered the Lindbergh case by announcing before his departure for New York that he has been appointed emissary for a gang of men he believes are holding the famous child and already has had three contacts. He also says he has offered ransom far in excess of $50,000.

He is Maj. Nicholas H. Modinos, proprietor of two restaurants here, a member of the British Secret Service during the war.

Modinos was in New York Saturday night, returned here yesterday and went back to New York again last night. He claimed he contacts with the gang by "first going to New York to elude any possible followers and then going to the trysting place."

He said he was recommended to the gang by a New Yorker who was associated with him during the war and claimed the men he believes are keeping the baby wrote to Col. and Mrs. Lindbergh asking that he be recognized as their "go-between."

THREE CONFERENCES

The major told reporters he has held three conferences with the gang and expects to have a fourth today or tomorrow at a place he refused to reveal. He also declined to name the New Yorker who, he asserted, recommended him to the alleged kidnapers.

"At one stage in the conferences with the kidnap gang I was empowered to announce a

LEADERSHIP OF RASKOB AT STAKE IN CHICAGO

WAR FORECAST ON CHOICE OF 'KEYNOTER'

Democratic Chairman Favors Shouse; Others Back Barkley, Kentucky Senator

Chicago, April 4 (INS)—The immediate political future of John J. Raskob, multi-millionaire chairman of the Democratic National Committee, hung in the balance as the party's arrangements committee met here today to select a convention 'keynoter.'

Reports were that Jouett Shouse, Raskob's choice, would be denied the honor. Shouse has obtained pledges or support from several members of the group, but it was believed his strength was insufficient.

As the committeemen assembled in the Congress Hotel it was predicted the fight between Jouett Shouse, Raskob choice, and Senator Alben W. Barkley, Roosevelt adherent, for the honor of delivering the keynote address would be very close.

"There probably will not be two votes difference, either way," was the way one member sized up the situation.

FARLEY ARRIVES EARLY

There are 24 members on the arrangements committee. Among those present were:

Harry F. Byrd, former governor of Virginia; Judge J. R. Armstrong, Oklahoma; Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Ross, former governor of Wyoming; Robert Jackson, New Hampshire; Jouett Shouse, Kansas; Norman E. Mack, New York; Arthur Mullen, Nebraska; William T. Kempner, Missouri; Maj. John Cohen, Georgia; Vincent M. Miles, Oklahoma; Joseph Wolf, Minnesota; J. Bruce Kremer, Montana; Thomas Taggart, Jr., Indiana; Mrs. Clara D. Seiver, Texas; Mrs. Ana Struble, South Dakota; Mrs. John C. Greenway, Arizona; Horatio J. Abbott, Michigan; Frank Hague, New Jersey; Isidore B. Dockweiler, California, and Archibald McNeil, Connecticut.

Although not a member of the committee, James A. Farley of New York, Roosevelt leader and a possible national chairman if Governor Roosevelt should win the nomination, arrived early and established headquarters in the hotel.

OPPOSITION TO RASKOB

Raskob was appointed by Alfred E. Smith in 1928. Since then, the former General Motors executive has spent nearly $1,000,000 to improve the party organization.

His firm stand against prohibition, coupled with his reputed friendliness toward Wall Street, has provoked bitter attacks from the rank and file Democrats. He has been charged with holding a "mortgage" on the party.

Anti-Raskob sentiment is growing more intense as the convention approaches. Nine leading Democrats are now seeking to raise $1,500,000 to pay off the deficit and finance the campaign.

If Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt is nominated, Raskob may be succeeded by James Farley, manager of the Roosevelt pre-convention drive.

In soliciting party funds, the leaders claim the Democrats this year have good prospects of capturing 266 electoral votes, more than enough to elect a President.

SOUTH END FIRE DRIVES OUT 82

Eighty-two guests fled from a fire in the Hotel Plymouth, South End, 12 children were rescued in a two-alarm blaze in Woburn and a Saugus man carried his wife to safety as flames swept his home early today.

The Woburn blaze destroyed the barn of Andre Malino in Russell ct., Woburn, in the highest section of the city, and threatened the homes of Malino and a neighbor. Two alarms were sounded and members of the Lexington department aided Woburn firemen. Damage was set at $5000.

Shaw Says South Africa Is Like Erin

Southampton, Eng., April 4 (AP)—George Bernard Shaw arrived today from his winter sojourn in Cape Colony, South Africa, with something to say about South Africa in particular and Ireland in general.

Here's what he told the reporters who met him at the gangplank:

"South Africa does not know the war is over—the Boer War. The British and Dutch are still conducting a lively feud.

"The Dutch are a remarkable people mentally and physically, but religiously they live in the 17th century and believe in a brimstone hell. The empire ought to send a few missionaries to them. I have done all I can.

"There is a terrible native question in South Africa and no place for poor white people. The only thing for poor whites is the lethal chamber.

"Ireland is like South Africa—the Irish don't know the war is over. The Irish Republican army still thinks Ireland is enslaved and must go on being 'agin' the government."

DEATHS, RIOTS IN HITLER FIGHT

Berlin, April 4 (AP)—Three dead, scores wounded and hundreds arrested was the toll today of the first day of Germany's second presidential election campaign in less than a month. The election is to be held on April 10.

Throughout the country while Adolf Hitler, National Socialist leader, took the stump again to denounce the government of President Paul von Hindenburg, his "Nazi" forces fought with Communists, Communists fought with "Nazis" and both battled the police and the "iron men" of the republic, leaving a trail of death and blood and broken heads.

Hitler mounted a rostrum at Leipsic before an audience of 50,000 and scored the government.

"I will fight to the bitter end," he said. "Whether fate has chosen me to achieve the final victory I leave to the Almighty, but my incessant labors to that end entitle me to carry the fight to the finish."

Fishkill, N. Y., April 4 (AP)—William Craig's dog got smart just in time.

Craig figured the hound was getting old, so he arranged to have him put to death. When he reached the dog pound they were all out of lethal gas, so the dog was taken home to await the gas' arrival. As if he knew what was up, the dog suddenly became unusually active and began chasing rats with his old-time vigor.

By the time the gas arrived he had dispatched 28 rodents.

Craig decided to let him live out his days.

Fuller flew into a snowstorm and apparently was blinded by the heavy snow on the windows. The plane hit a fence and all four occupants were killed instantly.

Business So Good He Boosts Pay and Gives Days Off

San Francisco, April 4 (AP)—Having given his employes two pay increases in the last year "because business is so good with us," Roman C. Pell, Jr., president of the Pelican Paper Co., here, today announced the establishment of an alternate five-day week in his plant, with no cut in salaries.

The first increase was granted last May. There was another last January. Beginning the first Saturday in May, half of his employes, Pell said, would be given the day off. The next Saturday the other half will have the day to themselves.

Among other recent innovations by Pell is the serving of tea to his employes every afternoon.

"Business is better, at least with us," associates of Pell said. "But we believe that condition is general throughout the industry here."

In a letter to employes announcing the change, Pell said:

M'DONALD AND TARDIEU TALK DEBT STATUS

By HARRY K. REYNOLDS
International News Service Correspondent

London, April 4 (INS)—Representatives of Great Britain and France met at 10 Downing st. today ostensibly to discuss the Danubian Federation, but the conversations immediately branched into the wider fields of debts, reparations and disarmament.

The chief conferees were Premier Andre Tardieu of France and Prime Minister J. Ramsay MacDonald of Great Britain.

While official statements from both Premiers so far have dealt solely with generalizations, reports from Paris indicated strongly that Tardieu is here mainly to strengthen the Anglo-French reparations front against the United States.

The French Premier, it was understood, is desirous of pinning Premier MacDonald down to a definite declaration that Great Britain and France can pay war debts to the United States only out of funds received in the form of reparations from Germany.

This has been the French stand from the beginning, and, while Britain has been known unofficially to favor it, Premier MacDonald thus far has refrained from a formal, unequivocal declaration along this line.

Britain's reparations stand is predicated upon the Balfour declaration, which favors all-round cancellation of debts and reparations or, failing that, collection by Britain of only as much as she needs to pay her creditors.

Some months ago the statue was knocked over by an automobile but it was decided its position in the center of Edward Everett sq. was a menace to traffic so it was relegated to Franklin Park.

HOOVER SPRINGS SURPRISE CALL FOR ECONOMY

Special Message to Congress Asks Appointment of Committee to Work With Him

Washington, April 4 (AP)—In a surprise special message to Congress, President Hoover today called for appointment of delegates from both the Senate and the House to work with him in framing "a complete national program of economy."

The President declared further reduction of federal expenditures for the next year to be an absolute necessity.

He asserted, however, that various agencies in Congress working toward this end lacked the necessary unity of action.

PROMPT ACTION SOUGHT

"Therefore," he continued, "I recommend to the Congress that in order to secure this unity of effort and prompt action, and thus insure the relief of the taxpayer and a balanced budget, at the same time protecting vital service of the government, that representatives be delegated by the two houses, who, together with representatives of the executive, should be authorized to frame for action by the present Congress a complete national program of economy and to recommend the legislation necessary to make it possible and effective.

QUERIED BY ROBINSON.

The President asserted he was convinced that "only by such unified, non-partisan effort" and by a willingness "to share the difficulties and problems" could federal expenditures be properly curtailed.

Mr. Hoover said the "limit of executive authority to bring about economies has been reached," and that only by amendment of existings laws, eliminating less necessary functions and consolidating governmental bureaus could the end be attained.

Senator Robinson, Democratic leader, was prompted by the message to ask in the Senate why Mr. Hoover doesn't suggest specific expenditure reductions.

"Why does he shirk the responsibility that is upon him?" Robinson asked.

Senator LaFollette of Wisconsin, a Republican Independent, quoted an excerpt from an article by Virgil Jordan, economist, describing the "economic mess" as a "stupidity boom." Jordan's article took to task the administration and Congress.

"Is it possible," asked Robinson, "that the Executive is merely wishing to transfer from his own shoulders the weight of the burden of submitting a budget supplemented by reliable estimates?"

DEFENDED BY VANDENBERG

Senator Vandenberg, Republican, Michigan, asserted he felt the Democratic leader "is unfair when he says the President is attempting to shirk this responsibility."

Robinson then quoted from a statement by Mr. Hoover on February 24, in which the President said responsibility for administrative changes for economy "should be lodged with the excutive."

Senator Borah (R., Idaho), joined in the debate, saying:

"The President evidently has some legislation in mind from what he says in this message but why does he not specify it instead of dealing in these generalizations that lead nowhere and get no results."

Senator Couzens challenged a statement by Robinson that government salaries should be rduced because a dollar today will buy what it would a few years ago.

"That is true of wheat and some other commodities," Couzens said, "but it is wholly misleading when applied to government employes. I resent this wholesale propaganda and demand on the part of big business for a reduction in the salaries of government employes."

On the House side, Representative McDuffie of Alabama, Democratic whip and chairman of the special economy committee, said to newspapermen:

"Evidently the President has in mind many specific things he thinks could be done to save money. If he has and would send his specific program up to the economy committee, the committee would give it immediate consideration and report it immediately to the House."

ATTORNEY GETS THEM TO KISS AND MAKE UP

They Lose Their Husbands, but Win Each Other in Unusual Dedham Court Action

Two Stoughton sisters, each blaming the other for marital difficulties, met in Dedham court today, were granted divorces a few minutes after their surprise meeting—and were reunited after the proceedings.

To add to the unusualness of the court action, Atty. Harry B. Janock of Washington st., Stoughton, acted as counsel for both, although he didn't know until after he took the cases that his two clients were sisters.

Mrs. Beatrice Bradley of 270 Morton st., Stoughton, was granted a divorce from James F. Bradley, whom she married June 16, 1921. Helen, 10, and James, Jr., 6, were given into her custody.

Mrs. Lilliam M. Meehan won a divorce from Edward B. Meehan, to whom she was married November 29, 1931. Evelyn, 9, Robert, 7, and Richard, 4, were granted her.

Mrs. Bradley charged cruel and abusive treatment and Mrs. Meehan charged desertion.

MARJORIBANKS INSANE SUICIDE

Hailsham, East Sussex, England, April 4 (AP)—The coroner today returned a verdict that Edward Marjoribanks, brilliant young Conservative member of Parliament, committed suicide Saturday night while not in sound mind.

He was well over six feet and one of the best looking men in the House of Commons. He was the son of Archibald John Marjoribanks and the former Myssie Brown, of Nashville, Tenn. Mrs. Marjoribanks remarried later, becoming the wife of Douglas McGarel Hogg, the present Lord Hailsham.

PARKER THREAT TO KILL HER IS BARED

Court Bars Out "Justification" for Miss Fuller's Pistol Attack on Ex-Employer

Despite long and bitter battling by her attorney, Miss Blanche B. Fuller's "justification" for firing five shots at Ralph E. Parker, Boston insurance broker and her former employer, was excluded as evidence at her hearing in Waltham District Court today and she was held for the grand jury.

"We won't go into the past life of either of the parties," said Police Lieut. James P. Burke of Watertown, prosecuting officer, and Judge Connolly, presiding, agreed.

Judge Malcolm E. Sturtevant of Somerville District Court, counsel for Miss Fuller, succeeded, however, in adding considerable to the police story of the shooting.

BARES DEATH THREAT

The only witness was Police Lieut. Joseph R. Reilly, to whom Miss Fuller had told her story. Except for cross-examination of Reilly, no defense was offered.

"The worst you can hold this defendant for is simple assault," argued Judge Sturtevant.

"There is no evidence she didn't have a permit to carry the gun. No one has testified any bullets were fired. She may have had blank cartridges in the pistol for all the evidence shows."

Judge Connolly held Miss Fuller for the grand jury on the original charge of assault with intent to kill Fuller and a new count of carrying a gun. He refused to cut the $5000 bail.

Judge Sturtevant succeeded in bringing out, however, that Miss Fuller told police Parker had said he would like to shoot her.

He also brought out that Miss Fuller told police Parker took her into his home and boasted that few men could take other women into their homes.

HAD PLANNED SUICIDE

He read question after question put to Miss Fuller by police, relating to a trip to New York and visits by Parker to her Commonwealth ave. apartment, all of which Judge Connolly ruled out.

In a statement to the court, Judge Sturtevant declared Miss Fuller had also told police Parker "hounded her until he got her crazy."

The trial also brought out today that Miss Fuller told police she intended to kill herself after killing Parker in the presence of his wife.

The police wished to introduce only that part of her statement which related to the shooting.

As the trial started, with Mr. and Mrs. Parker waiting to testify, Clerk Mansfield read an additional charge, accusing the defendant of carrying a gun without a permit.

BAR WIFE'S "THREAT"

She pleaded not guilty, as she had also pleaded not guilty to the charge of assault on Parker with intent to kill him.

Miss Fuller was taken to the Waltham courthouse from East Cambridge jail, where she had been since Wednesday because she was unable to put up $5000 bail.

Among the features of the defendant's statement to police, which her attorney succeeded in adding to the police picture of the shooting, were the following words which she ascribed to her employer:

"I would like to be on the firing line and have you at the other end of it."

Judge Sturtevant failed in an effort to bring out that Parker had said his wife would "put a bullet into" Miss Fuller.

Police Lieut. James P. Burke of Watertown, as prosecuting officer, called Lieut. Joseph R. Reilly as the first witness and asked if Miss Fuller made a statement to him on the night of March 30. Reilly said she had.

Burke: "Give us that part of her statement which applies directly to the charges against this defendant."

TWO COMPLAINTS

Judge Sturtevant: "We ought to have all of it."

Burke: "I don't intend to put in all of it."

Judge Connolly: "There are two complaints. The evidence should be restricted to the complaints."

Sturtevant: "If part of that statement is by way of justification for the assault, we ought to have all of it. You cannot pass on it, your honor, without knowing what it is."

Lieut. Riley told me that she went to the home of Parker at about 5 o'clock that afternoon. Her purpose was to see Parker. The maid answered the door. She went in and had a conversation with the maid.

"She waited about 20 minutes and Mrs. Parker came home. She had a conversation with Mrs. Parker. About five minutes later they both looked out the window and saw Parker coming.

"Miss Fuller said she took out a revolver and fired several shots. She said she intended to kill him and to end her own life."

IDENTIFY LINDY IN PLANE HUNT OVER VINEYARD

who knows Lindbergh, told the Boston Evening American:

"I will not affirm or deny that Col. Lindbergh was in the plane. That ought to be answer enough."

The ship headed away from the field in the direction from which it came, out across Buzzards bay toward Cuttyhunk, Marthas Vineyard and the desolate No Man's Land.

SEEN SEVERAL TIMES.

It was identified as the same plane that landed on Cuttyhunk by its registration—NC54V. Reports from Marthas Vineyard said the same amphibian patrolled the island shore in the late afternoon and was observed several times passing close to Menemsha head.

At Cuttyhunk two fishermen, who observed the crew of the plane, said they were positive that Col. Lindbergh was the pilot.

Charles Tilton, one of the fishermen, said he had seen many pictures of Lindbergh and could not be mistaken.

A boat named Sally or Sallie, or Nellie, was reported the object of search by Coast Guard vessels in the vicinity today.

At the Gay Head Coast Guard station on Marthas Vineyard Chief Boatswain's Mate Arthur Lamphiere admitted he was checking up on all vessels in the sound, but refused to say for what reason.

The patrol boat CG-133 was off Menemsha and the CG-208 was off Vineyard Haven. The CG-6, based at New York, was still in the vicinity of Cuttyhunk, where it was observed yesterday while the plane was at the island.

Comdr. Roderick Patch of the Coast Guard base at Woods Hole said he had no specific orders to search for any craft. He could not explain the presence of the New York boat in waters under his jurisdiction.

While on Cuttyhunk, the four members of the plane crew made inquiries concerning a 28-fot yacht, the Sally, or Sallie, which they suggested might have two men and two women aboard.

They appeared to expect word of her at the island and seemed disappointed that none of the few natives had observed her.

The registration numbers on the mahogany-colored plane, as observed on Cuttyhunk and again at Round Hill, identified her as the property of the United Airports of Connecticut, Inc., of East Hartford, Ct.

STARTED LAST WEDNESDAY.

Benjamin Whalen, manager of that company, told the Boston Evening American that the ship was taken the middle of last wek by Pilot L. B. Burchelle, attached to the New York office of the Sikorsky company, and has not since been returned.

Whalen said Bouchelle told him he had "prospective customers," but that he had not since heard from the pilot and was not concerned about his failure to return the ship.

In New York, Bouchelle said that on Feb. 27 he took the plane from Hartford to New York and Wilmington and a few days later returned it to Hartford and had not since seen it. He said he knew no Lindbergh connection with it.

Confronted with this contradiction, Whalen said he had guessed that Bouchelle took it last because he usually did, "but anyway some Silkorsky pilot took it last week and failed to return it."

Trying to find a specific small boat of the size reported from Cuttyhunk was like trying to find a needle in a haystack. There are any number of craft named Sally and Sallie and Nellie, the latter name having been injected by Marthas Vineyard natives, who said they understood coastguardsmen were seeking her.

No boats under five tons are listed by name in the customs service; they have numbers.

REQUEST SILENCE.

The plane landed at 9 a. m. yesterday on Cuttyhunk and three men went ashore, one remaining in the amphibian. They made inquiries regarding the yacht but no one could recall seeing the craft recently The visitors also asked questions regarding the geography of the coast and the islands.

Later the party went to a dining place operated by Mr. and Mrs. Walter Allen, where they remained for some time, although holding aloof from all except those who served them. Neither Allen nor his wife would comment on the visitors and admitted they had been asked not to talk.

When they returned to the plane they called on Capt. J. F. Paul of the Cuttyhunk coast guard station for a tow. Owing to the restricted area of the spot where they landed they could not take off, and asked to be towed to the bay outside.

After taking off the plane was seen for some time cruising about the vicinity, leading to the belief that an arranged rendezvous had failed.

The estate of former Senator William M. Butler at Lambert's Cove, Marthas Vineyard, figured to be the rendezvous in view of the activities there last night after four strangers had apeared on the island.

The quartet reached the island late Saturday afternoon and asked for directions to the Butler estate. They failed to appear there but late Saturday night the caretaker saw an auto racing along a private road leading to the estate. He said he could not hear the motor because of a storm but he saw the lights swing up the road and then down another leading away from the estate.

DESOLATE SPOT

Of all the islands off the Massachusetts coast which might be used for a rendezvous or a base by kidnapers, No Man's Land, southeast of Marthas Vineyard, is the most picturesque.

It is 1000 acres and has a half dozen inhabitants and no means of communication with the rest of the world except through occasional fishing boats. It is owned by a private game preserve by Joshua Crane and its only inhabitants are the Wood family, acting as caretakers.

The Norsemen are supposed to have landed on it when they reached the New World and an inscription in Runic characters on one of its rocks has been translated "Lief Ericksson, 1001."

ransom demand considerably in excess of that hitherto announced," Modinos said.

He also declared he expects to be able to announce "something more definite about the baby's safe return to his parents and the amount of ransom" when he returns here late today or tomorrow.

Modinos holds many war decorations, being particularly rewarded for his feat in getting the gun range for the British on the Dardanelles by floating in a rubber cask 48 hours.

John H. Curtis, one of the three Norfolk negotiators for the Lindberghs, visited here about 10 days ago during one of his secret trips.

It was considered significant that Curtis should be absent on a secret mission today at the same time Modinos is away to negotiate with the supposed kidnapers.

Modinos announcement that he was named to the gang by a New Yorker recalled that the Lindberghs have three emissaries in New York, "Salvay" Spitale and rving Bitz, New York characters, and Morris Rosner, a New Yorker who is familiar with the underworld. All three were publicly named to try to contact with the kidnapers.

Important Developments Thought to Be Pending

By DAVID P. SENTNER
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

Trenton, N. J., April 4 (INS)—A revival of tension surrounding the whole Lindbergh kidnaping investigation today gave rise to speculation as to whether or not important developments are pending.

Although, officially, this morning's "news bulletin" to the press carried no new information of consequence, the authorities, it was known, were watching with interest expected developments in Norfolk, Va., at the Lindbergh home in Hopewell and in England, where an emissary of the state police has gone on a mysterious mission.

Col. Lindbergh's unexplained trip from Hopewell to some unrevealed destination had the effect or arousing still further speculation.

Col. Schwarzkopf, head of the New Jersey State police, in his official press bulletin this morning, started his statement with these words:

STILL MENTIONS FLEISCHER

"As stated before, further information covering Maj. Schoeffel's trip will be given out upon his return."

Maj. Charles H. Schoeffel, of the state police, arrived in England Sunday on a mission concerned with the kidnaping. He was met at Southhampton by Scotland Yard official.

The whereabouts of Harry Fleischer, repurted leader of "the purple gang" of Detroit, and Abie Wagner of New York, remained a mystery. In touching on this angle of the investigation Col. Schwarzkopf said this morning:

"A report received a week ago that Fleischer was seen has been thoroughly investigated but no further information has been received as to his whereabouts. Reports on Wagner's death still continue."

The rest of Col. Schwarzkopf's statement was equally negative. It said:

'Information investigated yesterday did not land any important developments. Some of this information is under investigation again today and if anything develops that can be released for publication we will give it out in our next bulletin.

"The leads which have withstood investigation are still being vigorously followed and will continue to be followed."

Meanwhile, in Norfolk, Va., the activities of the three Norfolk intermediaries—John H. Curtis, ship builder; Rev. H. Dobson-Peacock and Rear Admiral Guy H. Burrage, were still shrouded in mystery.

Another secret trip of Curtis to an unexplained destination evoked no little conjecture and had the effect of accentuating the tension of those waiting for a possible "break" in the base.

LINDY BACK HOME

Col. Charles A. Lindbergh returned early today to his Hopewell home from a mysterious trip, believed to be Martha's Vineyard.

He failed to reveal whether his absence was connected with activities in recovering his kidnaped infant son.

Evidently he mistook them for state troopers, for he called out:

"Are you the police?"

"No, we are the press," came the answer. "Is there anything new?"

"Thank you," said Lindbergh, and continued to his home.

LOOKING FOR "SALLIE"

This gave rise to reports Col. Lindbergh had been one of four men who landed an amphibian plane at Cuttyhunk Island, Mass., yesterday, and who by inhabitants were assumed to be connected with negotiations for the return of the baby.

They seemed to be interested in locating a boat called "Sallie."

Officials, however, denied such reports.

With Lindbergh in the car was another man, generally believed to have been Col. Henry Breckenridge, his legal adviser, or John Fogarty, a private detective engaged in the hunt for the abductors by Lindbergh.

It was the first time Lindbergh is known to have left his home since the child was stolen, except once, shortly after that happened, when he motored away with state troopers and returned a few hours later.

DENIAL BY POLICE

Rumors Lindbergh had gone on a secret journey were current all day yesterday. Lieut. Walter Coughlin, official spokesman for the state police here, was asked about them a few moments before Lindbergh was seen to return.

"I wish to deny on behalf of the state police that either Colonel Lindbergh or Mrs. Lindbergh have left Hopewell at any time over the week-end," he declared.

Despite this denial, reports persisted that Mrs. Lindbergh and her mother, Mrs. Dwight W. Morrow, went to some undisclosed destination by motor yesterday.

Police also refused to affirm or deny rumors that Betty Gow, Lindbergh nurse; Ollie Wheatley, butler in the household, and his wife, the housekeeper, went for an automobile ride in a car containing at least one other man.

REFUSES TO ANSWER.

Col. Schwarzkopf asked about all these matters, said in his statement:

"No questions will be answered having to do with the whereabouts of the Lindbergh family."

The plane which landed at Martha's Vineyard aroused comment when three of its occupants went ashore, while the pilot remained at the controls of the amphibian.

PRIVATELY OWNED.

Some of the residents spread rumors that John H. Curtis, Norfolk, Va., shipbuilder, one of three Lindbergh emissaries to deal with the kidnapers, was a passenger on the craft. Confirmation of this could not be obtained. Curtis is known to be away from home on a secret trip.

Whatever object Lindbergn's sudden emergence from his isolation was, it was definitely announced in Norfolk that Curtis was still away on the trip that was to lead to conferences with either the kidnapers or one of their agents.

No official reports were received, so far as could be ascertained, from Maj. Charles H. Schoeffel of the New Jersey state police, who went to London in connection with the kidnaping.

Federal agents, assigned by the Department of Justice who were active last week, were recalled, apparently by Washington orders.

An unofficial report was circulated both federal and state police agencies were asked to suspend their surveillance of the Lindbergh home, or even withdraw from the estate.

The federal men last week were said to have checked up on information given by Asa Hill, a farmer living on Wertsville road, near Hopewell.

Two British sailors, he declared, a few days before the abduction, seemed to be examining the surroundings of the Lindbergh home minutely.

When they saw themselves watched by Hill, the latter said, they approached him and said they were salesmen and offered to sell him some trinkets from Port Said. They had none with them, however, and their actions aroused Hill's suspicion.

Maj. Schoeffel Confers With Scotland Yard Heads

London, April 4 (INS)—Scotland Yard officially advitted today that it was "in communication" with Maj. Charles H. Schoeffel, of the New Jersey state police, who is in Europe to run down clues in the Lindbergh kidnaping.

No further official word was forthcoming, but it was learned that Maj. Schoeffel planned to entrain for Glasgow as soon as possible. Scotland Yard has offered him all assistance it can render.

After speeding away from Waterloo station last night, successfully evading all reporters who attempted to pursue him, Schoeffel was not found again until this morning, when he appeared at Scotland Yard.

He immediately was shown into the office of one of the assistant commissioners, with whom he stayed a quarter of an hour. It was understood Lord Trenchard, commissioner of the yard, looked into the conference briefly, while several high police heads sat in to learn of the American's plans.

During his visit it was learned, Schoeffel spent most of the time talking with Norman Kendall, head of the Criminal Investigation Deparment.

HIDES HIS IDENTITY.

Nothing further could be learned of Schoeffel's plans. It was recalled that the mother of Miss Betty Gow, nurse to the Lindbergh baby, resides in Glasgow, and it was believed Schoeffel would at least do all the investigating possible here even if there were no other lines to be run down in the Scotch city.

Maj. Schoeffel, on landing here, made every effort to hide his identity. He disembarked from the Mauretania at Southampton yesterday without checking through either customs or immigration lines, being escorted by Scotland Yard detectives.

Hardly anyone was aware of his identity, and reporters, photographers, and even police officials were left watching the gangplank and government offices while Maj. Schoeffel was being whisked away to London.

After denying his identity several times he finally admitted to International News Service that he was Maj. Schoeffel and that he was "trying to tie up some loose ends of the Lindbergh case over here."

SCOTTISH CLUE

He would reveal no more details of his mission.

"I can't discuss the case," he said.

There were reports that Birmingham and Glasgow angles were to be discussed, as well as a rumor that a man and woman were seen traveling in Scotland with a baby resembling the Lindbergh child.

The Sunday newspaper News of the World declared an unnamed Londoner was aproached three months ago to join in a scheme of wholesale kidnaping of children of wealthy parents in Europe and America, to be headed by a well-known international crook. The paper suggested that Maj. Schoeffel may be investigating this angle.

FEARED GANG VENGEANCE

The London Daily Express found relatives of Miss Gow in Glasgow four days after the kidnaping. At that time the relatives refused to talk of the kidnaping lest it provoke "gang vengeance" on the young nurse. They had not heard from her then, and the paper quoted Mrs. Taylor as saying:

"She has an excellent position in the Lindbergh family and has been with them very happily since before the baby was born."

On the same date Scotland Yard recieved a request from the New Jersey police for information concerning persons who formerly lived in Great Britain, and in Trenton it was indicated that these persons were Betty Gow and the Lindbergh butler and housekeeper.

LETTER TOLD OF KIDNAPING

The Express on March 12 printed a letter said to have been received from Miss Gow by Mrs. Taylor. In it the nursemaid said she felt "numbed and terribly lost without that darling" in referring to the Lindbergh child and added that Mrs. Lindbergh was being "very brave about it."

The letter described how the nurse discovered the baby was gone when she went to lift him at 10 p. m. on the night of March 1, and how she had been sent for by Mrs. Lindbergh because the baby had a cold.

She said the Lindberghs had guessed that the child had been taken while the family and servants were at dinner.

Burrage Is Back in Norfolk; Hughes Still Out of Town

Norfolk, Va., April 4 (AP)—Rear Admiral Guy H. Burrage, retired, reported absent from his home last night and this morning, appeared unexpectedly before a meeting of newspapermen today and tersely announced that he had nothing to say regarding negotiations here to recover the stolen Lindbergh baby.

Admiral Burrage refused to say when his fellow-negotiator, John Hughes Curtis, was expected back in Norfolk from a trip in the interest of the negotiations.

He declined to say whether or not he himself had been out of town. At his home it was reported he was away and that it was not known when he would return.

Interest was stimulated today in the trip being made by Curtis because of the length of his absence from the city. A member of the family said his return to Norfolk was not expected before tomorrow. On his last trip he was away for about 33 hours, traveling in a Navy plane.

Curtis slipped away from Norfolk early Saturday morning on his second mysterious mission to negotiate the return of the baby from its abductors. The first trip, Curtis said, upon his return, had been successful and the negotiations had been advanced to the "semi-final" stage.

Bulletins reporting the landing of an Amphibian plane at Gosnold Island were in accord with unconfirmed rumors that Martha's Vineyard, Mass., was his destination.

$75,000 FIRE IN SHELDON, VT.

Sheldon, Vt., April 4 (AP)—Eight buildings and a highway bridge were destroyed by a fire today that wiped out half the village of Sheldon. The loss is $75,000.

Sheldon has no regular fire department and called upon Enosburg Falls, eight miles away, for help, after the fire had started in the general store of W. H. Mower. By the time the Enosburg firemen arrived, however, the bridge across the stream which separates the two halves of the village was in flames and they were unable to reach the fire.

The postoffice, a creamery and two stores were among the structures destroyed.

$6.50 Whiskey Puts Damp on Finland Celebration

Helsingfors, Finland, April 4 (AP)—Whiskey at $6.50 a bottle and cognac at $9.25 dampened preparations for celebrations tomorrow, when Finland's 12-year-old prohibition law goes into the discard.

Some restaurants declared they would refuse to handle the newly-legalized "hard" liquor because of the high price fixed by the government, which has sole control over the trade under the new law.

Another rift between government and restaurateurs developed over the margin of profit demanded by the government. The liquor monopoly decreed it would take 60 per cent of the profits on all sales.

The law provides that a share of the profit be allotted for "temperance purposes," prevention of illegal traffic and old age and unemployment funds. The rest is set aside for the state treasury, but part of this is to be allocated to the state's "national culture, temperance and benevolent work."

The Helsingfors Alcohol Company ordered that, for the present at least, alcohol may be sold at only nine places in Helsingfors and a purchaser may buy not less one-third litre or more than litres. (A litre is approximatel quart.)

The restrictions were presc because the imported supply is yet equal to the anticipated mand.

Purchases of other liquor a limited to two bottles per pers

AUTHOR FAILS IN BRIDGE STUNT

New York, April 4 (AP)—Louis Joseph Vance, the author who kibitzed on Ely Culberton's April 1 bridge Olympic and said he could make at least 60 per cent of the pars on the 16 hands of the contest, fell 20 per cent under that, the Evening Post revealed today.

Mr. Vance, after causing a mild sensation by charging that the "secret" hands could be purchased from speculators a week before the zero hour for the play, sealed up his pars and sent them to the Post on Friday, before the contest started.

He was found to have agreed with the Culbertson pars on six hands and almost agreed on three others.

As to the others, Mr. Vance says the Culberton pars were "not the soundest bridge."

CURLEY SCORES 'POWER SLUSH' IN BATTLE

By BERNARD J. DOHERTY

That money of the power trust will be distributed freely in Massachusetts to bring about the defeat of Governor Franklin D. Roosvelt in the primary was charged today by Mayor Curley.

The mayor spoke before an audience of more than 1000 persons in the new forum building at 39 Court st. Amplifiers carried the address to a gathering of more than 500 others in front of City Hall annex.

BIDS FOES TO TALK.

In his opening remarks the mayor said that some apprehension was felt over the change of the forum from 333 Washington st. But, he stated, the success of the opening rally at the new location, within 50 yards of his old 1928 Smith headquarters, forecast as big a victory for Roosevelt as was chalked up for Smith four years ago.

The mayor then extended to an The mayor then extended to any one present "who intends to vote for the Donahue picked slate" an opportunity to state reasons for his decision. When he got no response he declared the people were not going to be fooled in voting for a man who is not a candidate.

CITES HARD TIMES

He wondered why anyone could hesitate to cast a vote for Gov. Roosevelt, the one man, he said, qualified to lift the nation out of its slough of despair.

He again painted a picture of the unemployed conditions throughout the country and called attention to the fact that in March he city was forced to find $1,100,000 to aid the needy.

President Hoover, Gov. Ely and the Legislature, he said, as a cure for conditions were all shouting economy.

"There is only one answer to unemployment," he declared emphatically, "and that is work and wages."

He denounced the Legislature and the Governor and the bankers for the wrecking of his public works program.

Darrow Glad No Women Are on Jury; Too Cruel, He Says

By JEAN HOBBS,
International News Service Special Correspondent.
Copyright, 1932, by International News Service.

Honolulu, April 4 (INS)—No woman will sit in judgment as Grace Hubbard Fortescue, American society woman, goes on trial with three men today for murder. Women are not eligible for jury duty in Hawaii.

The absence of women from the jury panel, however, had no effect on the confidence of Clarence Darrow, veteran chief counsel for the defense, in the outcome of the trial.

"No," was his emphatic answer to the question it women would not be more sympathetic and fair to Mrs. Forescue than men.

"Women," he added, "are more cruel as judges of their own kind than men.

"The wider experience of an average man's life gives him more tolerance and understanding than is possessed by women.

"Women make less intelligent jurors. Men are bad enough but women are worse. Intelligent persons, anyhow, try to evade jury service.

"The question of fairness has nothing to do with juries because one cannot judge people and be fair."

The women of Hawaii and elsewhere now seeking the right to jury service would be no happier with this added responsibility in Darrow's opinion.

"The more excitable emotional nature of women, however, makes them no less desirable as jurors, despite contentions of opponents to the movement. I would not rule women out of the jury box because of any emotional reactions they might have.

"I am perfectly content to accept an all-male jury in the present case, having complete faith in the justice of our cause."

SENATE HEARS PROTESTS ON TAX BILL

Washington, April 4 (AP)—The revenue raising bill passed Friday by the House was received in the Senate today and formally transmitted to the finance committee, where hearings will be started Wednesday.

Arrival of the tax bill in the Senate was marked also by a veritable flood of protests and demands to individual members against the new levies.

Senator Copeland (D.), New York, piled on his desk a huge stack representing part of 3000 letters and messages he received over the week-end from New York protesting against the House provision to tax stock transactions.

Senator Fess (R., Ohio), showed the Senate a sheaf of more than 3000 letters he received urging that he stand against any reduction in federal salaries.

"I want to note receipt of these letters," said Fess, "and have it reported that I simply cannot answer all of them. I also want to state that I cannot be influenced by this kind of propaganda."

THE PRESENTATION BALL FOR THE TWO COUSINS, Miss Junia Mason and Miss Louise Russell, held at the Country Club on Friday night was one of the loveliest and most successful parties of the entire season.

LOUISE RUSSELL

Owing to a bereavement in the family, the debuts of these charming girls were postponed in the early fall and some people remarked that it was TOO bad because, of course, it would prevent their having as gay a time as the others . . . meaning, of course, that the stags would be too busy to rush them.

Such has not been the case . . . Louise and Junia have been the center of attraction at all of the parties where they have been . . . and that was many . . . and some of the season's most attractive swains have always had them in tow.

Miss Junia was lovely at the ball in a white taffeta with tiny puffed sleeves, a touch of scarlet at the belt. She carried an old-fashioned bouquet of spring colorings. Miss Louise was likewise in the correct-for-little-debbies white but hers was of lustrous satin on long slim lines. Gardenias and lilies were her bouquet and she looked quite bridey.

Proud Mothers Handsomely Gowned

THE PROUD MOTHERS OF THESE FAIR MAIDENS, Mrs. Harold F. Mason of Beacon st., and Mrs. Charles T. Russell of Marlborough st., were handsomely gowned, Mrs. Mason in a lovely "string-bean" dress of green . . . so-called because of the vinelike shoulder arrangement . . . and Mrs. Russell wore fragile black lace . . . one of the season's favorites.

Junia Mason

THE COUNTRY CLUB WAS never more beautifully decorated than for this important party. From the lofty beams, smilax hung in arbor effect and at one end greens and trees were banked in the most original way with a tiny iron-grilled gate as though leading into a garden. Against this rich dark background the ivory whiteness of a garden seat gleamed with a drape of blue velvet carelessly thrown across. The effect was simply stunning.

Beautiful Tableau

LIKE A FORMAL FRENCH picture, two large standards holding jardinieres showered the whole with a brilliance of snapdragons in pinks, blue and yellows . . . too beautiful. It was really one of the most effective receiving dais we have seen. When the fair debutantes, Miss Mason, very blonde, and Miss Russell, very brunette, stood in front of it to greet their friends, we will never forget what a beautiful tableau it made.

New Style

JANE BANCROFT WAS ONE of the huge throng whom we picked out . . . She wore a NEW dress, if we are good at guessing . . . White with splashy large flowers, a new style note by the way. At least we haven't seen it on Jane before this season and it was very Springlike. Are we correct, Jane?

FROM WHITINSVILLE CAME Miss Betty Swift in a white gown. We haven't seen this Fair Thing about much this season but she is very attractive.

Just a Tip

DOROTHY FORBES WORE A printed bouffant silk, and it was charming on her. If some of these little girls knew how much better they look in "frillies" instead of "slimmies" they would go in for their type and not try to look like Pola Negri. We don't mean Miss Dorothy particularly, nor Alice Ellsworth, who was in an old gold satin, very exotic, but then again . . . maybe we do.

Popular Shade

HARRIET MOSELEY WAS in a shade of wisteria or raison which we have noted at a number of the balls recently. The modest violet hue always peeps up every season but usually hides her head after a few ventures.

IN A GREEN CREPE, Priscilla Prince, sister of the future Mrs. Howard Elliott, was very chic. These girls who have had a season abroad certainly have an AIR.

Everyone Present

SIMPLY EVERYONE WAS present at this last ball of the year . . . Two cunning little Nelson girls, cousins of the debutantes from New York, were causing a stir among the boys, one in green lace, and the other in a blue and white print. Prints are very smart at the moment. Another cousin, Isabel Russell, daughter of the Joe Russells of Dedham, wore a lovely blue chiffon.

Guests at Dinners

BEFORE THE PARTY, there was an ushers' dinner at the club and the older folks gave a dinner for their intimate friends at the same time. Let us say again, we like mixing ages . . . but not drinks.

CHIC YOUTHFUL FROCKS

SKETCHED IN PARIS

White Pique Is Headliner

By DOROTHY ROE

New York, April 4 (US)—White pique is practically the headliner of the spring accessory mode.

It appears in every possible form, and pretty soon, I suppose, they'll be handkerchiefs and stockings of it.

Thus far, those seem to be the only two articles of apparel that haven't come out in pique.

There's a white pique cloche hat, with a shallow crown and a dipped brim, that is one of the smartest things that has come down the gangplank. It is trimmed with a narrow binding of black taffeta, has a couple of buttons to secure the taffeta-piped band which goes from the edge of the brim straight across the crown and down on the other side, and altogether it has an air of being the last word.

They're showing handbags and even shoes of pique, just now, and of course the pique vest has been so publicized that it's practically a necessity in every wardrobe.

Big Dutch collars of white pique trim some of our more youthful tailored frocks, mostly of navy blue.

White pique suits are to be all the rage for summer, especially when worn with linen or cotton blouses in deep bright colors.

Radcliffe Club Plans Show

Books—And a Number of Things

By CHARLES HANSON TOWNE

SPRING IN THE CITY

Good morning, bright City,
Unutterably pretty,
With your shining eyes in the April air!
I see you there,
A vision, a dream, a girl in a lovely gown . . .
And yesterday
You were tired and drab and gray—
Just a dull old town.

But this morning!—well,
Some miracle
Has happened. You are debonair,
And young as the April weather.
I do not quite know whether
You are conscious of your beauty.
Every square,
Every flowery street
Hears the soft tread of rapturous feet;
For Spring has come down
From the country to the old town,
And her silver shoes trip lightly on the stones,
And an old hag, with dry old bones
Has vanished in a twinkling. In her place
Is a young girl with a lovely face,
And all of April's glamour and grace.
Good morning, bright City!

Some years ago in the course of a walk one afternoon down the avenue I encountered a handsome young man with whom I remembered I had gone to school. He greeted me enthusiastically and then told me the great news that he had decided upon a stage career. I recalled his performances in private theatricals and felt he might succeed in the calling he had chosen.

Then he broke the startling news to me that he had been engaged by Mrs. Fiske for a part in "Leah Kleschna," soon to open at the old Manhattan Theater. "You must be sure to come and see me," was his parting injunction.

Up to that time I had met few people in the "profession." (Why actors should appropriate that word "profession" as their very own I never could understand.) And so, with youthful fervor, I managed to purchase seats to see my old friend's debut.

There were five acts in that ancient play; but as the curtain descended on four of them and he had not made his appearance I grew restless and a little self-conscious, as the girl I had taken with me nudged me and asked when my erstwhile schoolmate would come on.

Finally the curtain rose on the last act, which depicted a lettuce patch somewhere in Austria. "He must be one of the heads of lettuce," my companion humorously told me. But no; he was to be a little more than that. A bearded character appeared, but until his one line I would never have recognized his well-disguised features.

"This way to the lettuce field," he announced to Mrs. Fiske; and with a sinking heart I realized that this was the debut I had paid four dollars to come and witness. For he left the stage after that and never crossed the boards again.

Later, encountering him again in the street, I told him it must be wonderful to have a part like that; for he did not have to appear until around 11 o'clock, and so, very likely, he could go and witness other plays along the glittering lane of Broadway, and then creep through the stage door to give his masterly performance.

"Ah, no," he said, being utterly devoid of humor. "You see, Mrs. Fiske demands that all her artists be on hand at seven-thirty."

The picture of him, as one of "the artists," being obliged to remain dreamily hidden behind the scenes for almost three hours was too much for me; and I hurried away.

But it is only fair to record that many years later he was to become a successful motion-picture star, facing the camera and giving the world a view of his unbearded countenance, receiving limitless "fan" mail, enjoying all the praise that was lavished upon him. Yet I never could see him on the screen without recalling that first humble appearance in the theater.

And only yesterday I met another friend just back from London after two years' absence. In some way we fell to discussing the difference between American and English clubs; and he told me this anecdote:

"I wished to join one good club over there, and so I went to a certain friend, who happened to be an elderly lord, to ask his advice as to which club would be the best for me during my lengthy stay.

"'I should say the X club,' he told me. I myself like it best of all. First, I am a paste man. That is, I like to do my parcels up with a certain good paste, and they have it in the X club. A fine, dependable paste it is. None better. Second, I like the X club tea, and I can drop in at five because they serve an excellent o'clock always sure of getting it. And, third, I like the X club because I don't know a single, bloody member!'"

Another friend of mine, Percy Waxman, who wrote that fine book, "The Black Napoleon," decided the other day that, because of the depression, he and his wife would go to live for several months on the island of Majorca, where, he ha been told, one's budget could be the smallest.

"It isn't exactly a desert island," he said to me, "but a wag wanted to know what ten books I would take along with me.

"'That's easy,' I answered him. "One copy of Shakespeare and nine copies of "'The Black Napoleon."'"

FATHER COUGHLIN INTERVIEW

Equality a Menace, Not Boon

By RUTH MUGGLEBEE
Boston Evening American Staff Correspondent

Copyright, 1932, by the Boston Evening American. All Rights Reserved.

Royal Oak, Mich., April 4—"It has been too much of a struggle for the modern woman to be happy."

Father Charles E. Coughlin, the radio priest of the Shrine of the Little Flower, who has awakened a bewildered public to cognizance of life's truths, made that statement after shaking his head in silent rejection of woman's so-called emancipation.

"Equalizing women with men is liable to result in women's dumping the ashes and carrying the coal hods—becoming servants instead of queens in their own homes."

The things that women have attained with their emanicpation and independence don't make for happiness, he pointed out.

Nature Defied

To Provide for Woman Is Natural Obligation of Man

"Man should keep woman."

To you women of America he said this:

"If women were wise, they would make men keep them. It is the natural thing for a man to provide for a woman. I mean, of course, the man who has a right to keep a woman.

"What's a woman's personal bank account to add to and draw from compared to a child's love? What's a woman's independent support compared to a home and a husband and their affection, that should be as one?

"Women need wisdom and if they had this wisdom they would look to men for support. They would make men keep them, those men who are privileged and honored, keep them. They wouldn't be keeping themselves, struggling against great odds in a world of competition and complication. They would be making their men keep them.

"And isn't it according to nature? Man buys the theater tickets. He pays for the ice-cream soda. He compensates the taxi driver. Then it is natural, and rightly so, that in the progress of life, men should continue to keep women.

"But what do we find today? We find girls earning more than boys. Girls perfectly willing to postpone marriage until boys make money, marking time as life passes them by.

"So many girls and boys come to me who are to be married and I talk with them only to discover that the girl earns more than the boy, that she is going to buy the wedding ring and pay for the wedding expenses."

Victims of Delusion

'Equalization' Reduces Woman From Queen to Servant

Father Coughlin slapped his knee and exclaimed:

"Oh, oh oh, my God. What a situation!"

"Woman bears man's children and that is no easy task, my friend. Then, why shouldn't man keep her? And why don't women become wise that they should be kept by their husbands?"

It is an upsetting arrangement of marriage when women earn more than men, a circumstance which undermines man's confidence and finds subsequent expression in marital disagreement.

If the modern woman thinks she is happy because she has a semi-official position, an enviable salary, a life to do with as she pleases, she is harboring an dillusion, Father Coughlin declared.

"All women haven't brains enough to get out into the world and rise to the ranks of professions. They struggle on in an industrial world and the struggle has become too hard for the modern woman to achieve happiness."

"Woman's emancipation is comparable to the democracy under which we are living. We have reached the extreme of democracy and we ask ourselves: 'How long is the kind of democracy we are having going to last?'

"We ask the same of woman's emancipation? How long is the kind of emancipation women are having going to last? Women have stepped down into the sordidness which men are supposed to handle. How long can they continue in the mire?

"Lest American women forget, they should be reminded of this: That equalizing women with men is liable to result in woman's dumping the ashes and carrying coal hods—becoming servants instead of queens in their own homes.

"Since 1832, when the first reform bill was passed in England, there has been a gradual tendency toward the so-called emancipation of womanhood, which date coincides with the advent of the century of machinery. And this feminist movement, this so-called emancipation has taken woman out of the home.

"Now in 1932, 100 years later, woman has witnessed herself staying equally with men on the platform in things politic. It may be a good thing, but, to my mind, it would be a far finer thing for a woman to remain in her home and rear the future politician in her own home under her wing. She may be rearing a future Senator, a future President.

Birth Control Pagan

Irreligion Dominating Home Life of American Families

"He needs his mother."

I asked Father Coughlin his views on birth control and its influence on family life. With these brief thoughts he dismissed the subject firmly and unequivocably:

"Those women favoring birth control have surrendered themselves to the ideals of paganism and to a betrayal to the god of political economy. The question of birth control is hundreds of years old. It was born not because of a great moral issue, but because of a matter of dollars and cents.

"Originally it was an economic issue and it still is an economic issue. Its whole history has been tied up with the so-called science of political economy."

That's all there was to that.

And then he turned to the matter of religion. He didn't talk about religion. He talked about irreligion, the lack of faith current in America and American homes today.

He was silent for a few moments. Around him was utter silence, the holy quiet of that little office "way up there" in the Crucifixion Tower.

"Irreligion," he began, "is dominating American life. Mothers have thrown away religion for themselves and their children. Fathers, too.

"Parents tell me they don't discuss religion or God in the home any more. Saying that is like saying, 'We never breathe in our home!' No mother can be the true mother of her home nor can she have a real home without religion and without practising religion.

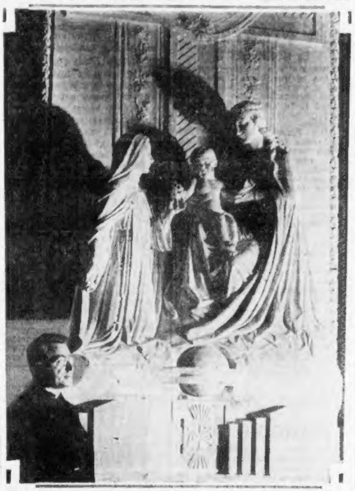
"Do you know what I would do if I threw away religion? Do you know how I would live if I renounced religion? If I was illogical enough to disbelieve in a life beyond—in the real life?"

His face became lined with determination.

And Father Coughlin made this startling announcement to the country's irreligionists, men and women—

(What he believes will be related in tomorrow's interview with the brilliant "Shepherd of the Air" in the Boston Evening American.")

RADIO PASTOR AT SHRINE



The "radio priest" in his shrine. The Rev. Charles Coughlin, Pastor of the Shrine of the Little Flower, Royal Oak, Mich., noted for his fiery nation-wide radio sermons on topics of national and world importance, in his Shrine at Royal Oak where he prepares his sermons for delivery over the air.

POPE TELLS OF LOVE FOR U. S.

Vatican City, April 4 (AP)—Pope Pius XI told 200 ecclesiastical students of the American College in an audience today that the United States offered "great hope for the future in the development of spiritual life."

"America is so dear to us," he said, "and has offered us so many consolations, we have great confidence in the future."

The pontiff predicted the young students for the priesthood would have a large share in this development.

"America is so important, so great a member of the apostolic family. She is both yours and ours."

Ford Plant Strike Collapses in Cork

Cork, Ireland, April 4 (AP)—The strike of employes of the Ford motor assembling plant here, who walked out on April 1, collapsed today when the men returned to work on their old wage scale.

The management agreed to negotiate for a new wage scale immediately, a development which was regarded as a victory for the workers. The men walked out to protest over a new wage cut.

RECEPTION FOR GIBBONS

San Francisco, April 4 (US)—A rousing welcome will be accorded Floyd Gibbons, war correspondent for Universal Service, when he returns from the Orient today aboard the liner President Coolidge.

"The city is yours; we are all proud of your remarkable work in China," radioed Mayor Angelo J. Rossi, who heads the reception committee.

And from Gibbons came this reply:

"You know I did not win the war in China; I only wrote about it. Am simply flabbergasted at arrangements you propose on my arrival. Sincerely hope this is not a case of mistaken identity."

From the ship, Gibbons will be escorted by Mayor Rossi and other city, state and military dignitaries, to City Hall, where he will be given the traditional key to the city.

'Sales Tax' of 2 Cts. on 'L' Ride Favored

New York, April 4 (INS)—A "sales tax" of 2 cents a ride on subway and elevated trains was favored today by Samuel Untermyer, former special counsel of the Transit Commission.

Bay State Boy Is Stowaway

By FLOYD GIBBONS,

Copyright, 1932, by International News Service.

Aboard the S. S. President Coolidge, en route to San Francisco, April 4 (INS)—Hello, everybody!

We're getting so close to home we can almost smell the politics, hear the shooting, and see that prosperity just around the corner.

This floating palace of the Pacific expects to crash the Golden Gate today with a full list of prosperous-looking passengers and her hold loaded down with a full cargo, and crew well-fed and happy and her books balanced far and away on the velvety side without so much as a spot of red ink.

Floyd Gibbons

Old Capt. Dollar and his boys seem to have weathered the shipping depression and now are making full-steam ahead with all reefs out.

There are all kinds on board here. We have one of the richest men in the world with us, and two of the poorest. I know all three of them and, do you know, I sort of belive the envy between the two opposing poles they represent is—well, mutual.

Yes, sir, it struck me all of a sudden that that rich man is probably envying those two poor ones just as much as they are envying him. It sounds like one of Rip's "Believe-It-or-Nots," but—well, here's the story:

ENVY IS MUTUAL

Sir Victor Sassoon is the rich man. His family doesn't exactly own all the tea in China nor all the cotton in India but if Rothschild, Morgan and Henry Ford were looking for a fourth at bridge—well, one of these here British Sassoons is about the only one I know of who could hold his end up in such a game.

Our rich fellow passenger has a handle on his name, a monocle in one eye and walks with a cane and it's sort of difficult for a Yank to figure out how a fellow with all these handicaps could be a democrat, but that's just what he is. . . .

He calls me Floyd and I call him Vic and he's trying to make me crave 5 o'clock tea and I'm trying to teach him American slang so people can understand him when he lands. You see, he just speaks English.

A real guy, too. He won that monocle and cane in the World War. Yes, sir, he went out for king and country in 1914—did his service in the air and was brought down with one gosh-awful crash in the following year, which just about broke every bone on his left side from his eye to his little toe.

And now for the two poorest men on board and boy—they certainly look like democrats—at least they did when we picked them up at sea on the second day out from Honolulu. They are stowaways and the first two I ever met up with.

We passengers didn't know anything about it until we sighted another ship coming staright for us three days ago right out in the middle of this ocean. She was the President Jackson, bound for Honolulu out of San Francisco. We stopped and she stopped while she lowered a small boat which rowed alongside of us and two young men caught a swinging rope ladder and climbed on board.

That night I went below decks and found the stowaways in the crew's hospital. Good looking boys, both of them—young, clear-eyed, with the brown tan of health on their faces and both of them with physiques that would make you watch 'em closely if you sparred with them.

They were clean shaven and upstanding, but their pants were out at the knees, their shirts ragged and one was hatless and coatless. Their combined wardrobe was hardly enough to flag a handcar.

What I liked was the way they could laught as we sat there on the bunks and smoked up a yarn.

"Look like bums, don't we?" the tall blond one with the smile asked.

ONE FROM CLINTON

His name is Bob Proctor and he hails from Brooklyn. He looked to be about 28 and said he served with the Fifth Marines in Belleau Wood.

"But we're not bums," Kirby continued, and both of them showed union registration cards as marine firemen and oilers.

Bob lighted his cigarette from Tom's and carried on.

"Both of us have been on the beach at Frisco for the past 10 months and couldn't get a berth any way. Around the seamen's institutes and flophouses until both of us wound up in a fight one night and landed in the bucket for 30 days.

"When we got out somebody met Tom with a jug and there was another row and Tom went back for 30 days more. When he got out we just decided Frisco was too busy taking care of its own destitute seamen so we decided to hit for the islands where if you can't get a job—well, you can sleep on the sand and dive for lobsters or eat cocoanuts and wild pineapples. Anyhow, we thought we'd try it. So we hopped the President Jackson.

"We hid in the flues above the boiler room—hanging there on a beam with the temperature hitting 140—boy, she was hot. Then we heard the pilot boat whistle three blasts and knew the ship couldn't turn back, so we came out of that hot spot and reported on deck.

ON BREAD AND WATER

"Then into the brig in handcuffs on bread and water for two days—you can't blame the line—they want to discourage stowaways. Believe me, bread and water does just that. But anyway, they next put us to work and that's what we wanted all along. A bit disappointed, though, when they told us we were not going to reach the islands after all but were going to be transferred at sea to this ship and sent right back to Frisco.

"Well, both of us are hoping we don't ga back into the bucket for another stretch, but if we do, we do, and anyhow it's all adventure—adventure out of not having a cent in your pocket and your clothes in rags and no job and your stomach empty and healthy appetite gnawing at the inside of it."

Girl About Town

—By ALYCE SIEMENS—

You Thoughtless Man!

A liar must have a good mem'ry,
A sponge: a conscience that's cold,
A drunkard needs someone with patience,
A chiseler hangs around gold.
A columnist must have his gossip,
A yes-man will never say "No"—
But if you'd read my mind at this moment,
You'd phone me to take in a show!
—Marge.

Steinke Snoop:

Alex Sullivan related an amusing bit to us at the Garden last Wednesday night . . . About that big kid, Hans Steinke . . . It seems Hans used to play quite a bit of pinochle with "Gentleman" Jack Washburn . . . But enough was enough, last week, when "Gentleman" Jack relieved Hans of $167 of his wrestling moneys . . . At pinochle! . . . So, what did Hans do? . . . He hopped on a train for Chicago . . . Pouted about out there until "Toots" Mondt finally had to pay the German's fare back to Beantown, in order that he'd be ready to check into the ring for his match last Wednesday . . . And who knows where the Masked Marvel disappeared to for an hour that same night, just before his match? . . . But, you can't blame those fellows much when you remember that many a great opera star's moments of temperament have not only made corking publicity but have been related down through the generations.

Two Guys and a Third One

Those two princes of music, Morton Downey and Jacques Renard, and Tony Wons are making hundreds of Hubsters happy at the R-K-O Keith-Boston this week . . . And if you want to see a shining example of P. A. (Personal Appearance) of a big fellow, don't miss Renard's correct tailoring, on and off the stage . . . That should be a lesson to all the boys—even the thin ones . . . What a genuine chap Morton Downey is—still the same good fellow . . . Still the charmer . . . And if that's Ray Sinatra's arrangement—the opening one of Southern melodies—no wonder he's in the big money now, with CBS keeping him boxed up in a Tiffany setting . . . Wons probably goes into his dramatic "reading" of a bit of Shakespeare's "Merchant of Venice," just in case any stray producers of stage dramas happen to "catch" Wons doing it . . . It may give them an idea—how dreadful it is . . . Mrs. Renard, recuperated from her recent illness, was up from N. Y. for the Copley breakfast, dressed in smart black and white crepe . . . A surprise on Jacques, and a nice one, too . . . Don't miss the Cameleers this week, especially good old Jacques and his muted fiddle and Downey's sweeter than sweet "Paradise" offering.

Things to Make a Note Of:

The strutting about now of James H. Powers since his "Years of Tumult" has become the second largest non-fiction seller . . . That Dr. A. Altshuler shouldn't be jealous of Billy Feinstein 'cause the "doc" is one of the better dancers we've seen about places! . . . That a credit association, near Kenmore sq., once employing 43 girls now down to employing 3! . . . That Marion Starkey, a former Boston Americaner, is now teaching pickininies in a Hampton, Virginia, school . . . That they're considering giving the Needham Town Team's first baseman's mitten to WEEI's Vic Whitman, when the baseballs begin to be pitched . . .

Madonna Donater Write!

Texas Guinan has asked us to say that she would like to have a communication from the lady who sent her a non-signed letter, enclosing an ivory madonna, a week ago . . . Kind lady, please send your name and address to Texas, care of the Statler, because she wants to personally thank you . . . And promise there will be no publicity attached to her thanks.

More Notes:

Because both men and women are cheering for Mrs. Beslie Cutler these days, she'll probably be the next member of the House of Representatives from the first Norfolk district—Needham, Dedham and Wellesley . . . Even though she was silver-spooned at birth, it didn't prevent her from efficient generalship of relief work for the needy and unemployed . . . Frank Crowley is having fun these days piloting the plane of stock operator Danforth under those Florida skies . . . Crowley used to be Pilot 13 on the Boston-New York mail run, 'member?

DOWNEY, WONS AND RENARD TRIUMPH

Radio Stars Packing 'Em In

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

Morton Downey speaking! The applause has suddenly halted—the big show is on. The peerless man of sweet minstrelsy is saying it in song. The ups and downs of love he is telling in that magnificent voice he has. It has magic; it holds this vast audience. The title? It doesn't much matter—"Just Friends," if you must know. This voice is the thing that counts—this voice, and this personality. It's Downey. Enough said.

Result: Wow business at the RKO Boston.

One gets used to personal appearance, and such, and the ovations that ensue. This advent of the chap who made the Downey clan famous, is something else again. And what a name it is to bring in the crowds—they're jamming in the lobby like sardines in the tin. Inside, it's a new record for attendance. The house is all zip and enthusiasm. The Downey voice is heard backstage, then the curtain. Rising to reveal a charming set. Then Tony Wons, sharing in the honors, and Jacques Renard.

Morton Downey

Morton Downey betrays a boyishness that intrigues us all on the spot. This fellow can smile. He looks as if he could blush, so fine is that face. When the voice breaks forth, you're all his. He is the conqueror by right of vocal might, but doesn't that 100 per cent P. A. of his count for something? After "Just Friends," triumphant applause; then "Kiss Me Good Night," and another ovation; then an Irish lullaby, and uproarious plaudits; "Paradise," the song you may have heard Pola Negri sing, and lastly, that favorite by him, "Carolina Moon."

Whereafter, you hear him bring down the house as it has never been brought down before. He deserves it all; that's the best part of it. Few performers we knew exhale as much good humor, as much sunshine of personality.

All this doesn't disparage the contribution to good entertainment from Mr. Wons, who recites and reads and demonstrates therein why he earns so much on the air; nor from Mr. Renard, who plays his violin notably well, and who leads the orchestra with masterly baton.

Two other good acts complete the bill, Togo and Cherry Blossom, and Flo Lewis the comedienne. On screen is featured "Steady Company," which starts off with a nice touch of romance and jumps into pugilistics for its punch. But its comedy is its best quality, thanks to Zasu Pitts and Henry Armetta, who fairly steals the picture.

THREE FAVORITES ON LOCAL STAGES

Western Epic Is Headliner

One of the best Westerns seen in a long time brightens the screens at the Fenway, Modern, and Beacon theaters. In "The Gay Caballero" a good cast is provided with an action yarn, which makes the silver sheet hum with its lively narrative. The dialogue, too, is far better than that encountered in pictures of this type.

Victor McLaglen and George O'Brien are the scrappy he-men of the plot, and both are at their best. Conchita Montenegro does very well, and Linda Watkins shows up very attractively. It's a very pleasing picture.

But the same cannot be written of "Cock of the Air," which falls short of success as a farce comedy, built upon the love of an American airman in the war for a singer in Paris. Billie Dove, gorgeously beautiful, finds the role below what she should have; and the same goes for Chester Morris, cast as the hero.

Walter Gieseking

Walter Gieseking, who is to make his only visit to Boston this season for a recital in Symphony Hall next Wednesday evening at 8:30, is now completing his sixth tour of America.

Rosa Ponselle in Program

By MOSES SMITH

Rosa Ponselle, leading soprano of the Metropolitan Opera Co., and a woman who deserves the great reputation she has acquired there sang in Symphony Hall yesterday before a large audience.

Miss Ponselle has the vocal equipment to sing music of all styles without obvious strain and with equally telling effect. Whether the song be an old air, an ornate operatic aria, or a cheap contemporary ballad, Miss Ponselle is able, both as singer and interpreter, to project it with exactly the right quality and quantity of tone, with effective facial and bodily play. Artistically, indeed, in her grasp of style, in subtlety of phrasing, she has travelled many leagues since she first sang here ten years ago; while she is still mistress of an extraordinarily dramatic temperament.

If only she would choose appropriately excellent material on which to exert her efforts instead of the non-descript assortment of jewels and rubbish which made up her program and numerous numbers yesterday, the cup of appreciation would be full.

Young Stars on Bowdoin Bill

The Bowdoin Square Theater is staging as its feature vaudeville attraction a group of clever high school students, known as the "Stars of Tomorrow." The cast includes:

Ned Humphries, called the "little George M. Cohan" of English high school; Mollie Spellman, known as Sophie Tucker at Memorial high school; the McClone Sisters, of Practical Arts high school; Vincent Pelrine, master of the xylophone, of Saugus high school; the Bradford Brothers, harmony singers, of Everett high school.

Actor Rallies to Defense of the Ultra Modern Girl

By HARRY McNAUGHTON

Leading Comedian With E. E. Clive in "The Ringer" at the Wilbur

Much attention is drawn daily to the modern girl, her demoralizing tendencies, her indiscretions, her ultra dress and what-not. Daily something new is added to the list of complaints and grievances against the thriving girl of 1930—particularly the ladies in my profession.

I read these articles not because they enlighten me, or because they reveal a truthful picture of the modern girl as a whole, but because they arouse just resentment against what are statements and misconceptions of a few women who have exaggerated the faults of the young women of the greatest age in history.

Harry McNaughton

Instead of concentrating our thoughts on the weak spots in a character—the character of the girl of 1931—why not let us seek to find some good qualities that offset them? Why constantly speak of roses having thorns. Let us be thankful that the thorns have roses.

Women do not seek flattery, they do not long for praise, but they want the honest recognition of what they have done, fair appreciation of what they are doing, and what they are striving to do. It may matter little after all, if the tendency of the age is to smoke? that there is a vogue for sheer hose or short skirts; that the restrictions upon the young girls are lessening in the wide, wide universe of young womanhood. The divergencies from the prescribed path of convention are only by the few in comparison with the majority who abide by them.

Let us look to the extraordinary and novel accomplishments of the young girls of our age and we may well be startled by their progress and at least their practical and economic superiority to the woman of the past.

AMERICA ABANDONS FAITH IN MONEY AND SUFFERS

By GILBERT SELDES

GILBERT SELDES

IN MOMENTS OF GREAT PAIN people usually fall on their knees and cry out that if they had not deserted the faith of their fathers their calamity would not have fallen upon them. Something of the sort has been said during the past three years, but I think an error has crept in. What we have abandoned is the faith of our uncles; we have been faithless to our belief in money. (Surely you remember money, although it is now a semi-mythical commodity — a thing we once used to purchase pleasure and which we now collect for taxes.) Money, it was freely said, was the god of America; for money and by money we lived; without it we died. Money was our single measure of success in life, our card of admission to society, our bulwark against misfortune, our substitute for love, culture and joy.

Morals Preferred

It appears that we never were sincere in our love for money; we were low hypocrites. For an entire decade we deliberately threw away so much money that we have virtually wrecked ourselves—and for what? For high moral principles, nothing else. Two major decisions were made; one by the people with the consent of the Government, one by the Government with the consent of the people; and both were ruinous and were known to be ruinous. Never since the Crusades was a nation so reckless with its wealth—and the nations of the Middle Ages had little choice. What is more, in the midst of poverty and national deficits we stand by our guns. We will not repeal prohibition and we will not recognize Russia.

The "Percentage"

I have no patience with those who insist that prohibition and our attitude to Russia are dictated by purely commercial impulses. To be sure, a financial principle existed in both cases; but the percentage of profit, in the past eight years at least, has been in favor of restoring liquor and recognizing Russia. The profit promised by the drys—sober Monday workmen, greater deposits in savings banks and all the rest—has worked out statistically, but not factually. The loss in trade with Russia is far greater than any loss we might have taken on Czarist bonds which, if we had been clever, we might have recouped if we had only been willing to buy and sell.

All Too Noble

We are, therefore, a highly principled country, ready to sacrifice wealth and national prosperity for noble ideals. The circumstance that these ideals are a little on the poppycock side has nothing to do with the case. As we look back on the days of our riches, we can say that we are happy, for we have been true to abstract principles of virtue and honor. As we look forward to higher taxes, more racketeering, longer breadlines and a subtle degeneration of character, our leaders, at least, can be happy, too. We have justified our existence as a nation by proving that man shall not live by bread alone. We are about to prove that he must live without bread altogether.

Our Foreign Friends

No nation is really prosperous, but it is pleasant to note that those who have not betrayed their ideals are in a better way than the others. I think it was Andre Maurois who noted that the French have a passion for the written contract—which is why they cannot bear the thought of nullifying the Treaty of Versailles, and why they are so bitter against the Russians. They are also devoted to the arts—not to money. The British, also, despise money and are interested in justice and the sanctity of law. The Italians and the Germans have their national gods, too. And some of these states have managed to trade with Russia—but of course not for the money it brings in; and none of them have deprived their citizens of liquor; and here and there you may find a tariff wall or a quota system, all for art and the joy of living. It is quite an inspiration to us.

There are moments when it seems that we would have done better if we had stuck to money. After all, we had the name of it.

Fifty Years' Memories

In addition to preserving an annual Christmas list of plays to see (and one, I believe, for Easter), Dr. William Lyon Phelps, of Yale, has recently noted down, in Scribner's, the plays he remembers, the outstanding ones of fifty years of playgoing, beginning with the "Passian Play" at Oberammergau and coming down to "The Barretts of Wimpole Street," and even breaking down before "The Blue Bird" and "Dear Brutus." One man's pap is undoubtedly another man's poison.

No Belly Laughs

What impresses me is the absence of a good, hearty laugh in the whole lot, and, on the contrary, the loftiness of Dr. Phelps' memories. I have a few of that noble order myself, including a performance of the "Medea," of Euripides, but I am afraid that whenever I am asked what I remember best in the theater it always comes down to Willie Collier staggering into a room with bowed legs, a saddle, and everything else that's left after trying to ride a horse. (The name of the play was "The Hottentot.") I think of Al Jolson bouncing up and down the runway. I think of Alla Nazimova in one of the worst plays in the world, called "El Comete," pronounced on the stage "Hell Comette"—and the future star of the Theater Guild being quite unbelievably bad. There was also Julia Marlowe in a play about the French Revolution—it was terrible.

Among Ace of Film Directors

Robert Wiene, director of "Der Andere," now at the Fine Arts Theater, leaped into international fame six or eight years ago when he made one of the most widely acclaimed motion pictures ever produced, "The Cabinet of Dr. Caligara."

While many of the most gifted silent screen directors lost power when they used sound, Wiene is not one of them. He did not plunge into the making of sound and dialogue pictures haphazardly. He studied the new medium, the new needs of pictures that could be heard as well as seen.

The Voice ◆ of ◆ Broadway

By Louis Sobol

Prattle and Tattle!

Just a jumble of chatter dripping in from the anemic veins of Broadway, from turbulent Hollywood and petulant Florida, from London and Paris. From Chicago comes word that Conchita Montenegro, the cinema hotsy, and Jimmie O'Keefe are dipping into the fragrant blossoms of what we plain-speaking folks call romance, and in Miami, Claire Ray, the white flame, and the stalwart Jimmy O'Brien are intertwining digits in the sentimental fashion, while out in Hollywood Clarence Brown and Dorothy Burgess are ready to elope any day. From Philadelphia seeps in word that the Douglas S. Blagdens, he's the brother of Harry, the fellow who figured in that Lake Placid "kidnaping" recently, are drifting, and over in London, the Prince of Wales, who's lost something like eight pounds in the last month, is casting his eyes wistfully toward these shores with the Olympic games as a plausible excuse to renew some acquaintances here. Philip Wylie, the scribbling man, should become a pappy either May 11th or May 12th, and in spite of all those very neat newspaper yarns, the Horace (Elise Bartlett Schildkraut) Liverights are not having the grandest time together although you ask either one of them and they'll spurt back, "Well, what's that to you?" and I guess they're right.

Certainly this is a Broadway column, but Broadway drifts all over the world. In inner circles in Washington, D. C., they're abuzz with the report that Sir Ronald Lindsay, the British ambassador, is to be recalled shortly to his island home. Jolson and Cantor gave each other plenty of ice when they met at Caliente the other week-end at noon hour. That is to say, they nodded politely and said "Howdedo" and from then on each confined his remarks to Joe Schenck, which reminds me, Georgie Jessel, they tell me, is somewhat peeved at me for constantly linking his name to that of Norma Talmadge's, but after all, I'm only a reporter and whenever I see Norma, George is right at her side. Jersey's 1933 license plates will be black with red numerals, which isn't half as exciting as the report that Florence Rice (remember when they insisted she was going to be the next Mrs. Peter Arno?) and Philip Holmes are really serious and matrimonially inclined.

A pretty romance gone smash. Warren Moscow, the newspaper man, who took pretty Janet Newcity up to City Hall only eight weeks ago and had Mayor Jimmy Walker seal the bond, is now living alone. The good-looking blonde gal whom you see quite often with Peggy Hopkins Joyce is her sister. The feud between Ramon of El Patio, and Sidney Solomon of the Central Park Casino has been refueled all over Beatrice Lillie, the services of whom both seek. Ramon raised his bid to $3000 per week, but the shrewd Lillie is still waiting. I'd like to interrupt at this point to clap a calloused mitt for the blonde Jeanette Loff, who honestly surprised me when I heard her warble for the first time in her debut with Buddy Rogers at the Penn Grill Monday night. So much for that. Marion "Kiki" Roberts stepped out with Max Hoffman, Jr., the other night and, of course, Broadway, knowing that Hoffman and Thelma White, his wife, have drifted, are now putting two and two together, but when I spoke to "Kiki" at Reuben's last night and asked her, she insisted that it was only the renewal of an old but harmless friendship.

Off to Paris sails the tempestuous Kathryn Ray, tomorrow, to rush to the arms of Martin W. Alzaga, better known to newspaper readers as Macoco and sometimes as plain Coco, although if she had said "yes" to the honorable proposal of a local influential gent Tuesday night, she'd have been financially secure for the rest of her life. However, Coco has plenty of doremi, too—to say nothing of glamour. Noel Coward slipped quietly into town yesterday to stay for a few weeks, but I don't suppose it'll interest him to learn that after an absence of many months, due to illness, Maj. Edward Bowes returns to the Capitol Sunday night. Five organizations which represent chain store systems seeking a reduction in their rent and which receive 5 per cent of the savings effected for their efforts are being investigated, and over in the Prudence Co. there's been a shakeup among some of the higher-ups.

Leyla Georgie, the original Charmaine in the stage "What Price Glory," who's just written a scorchy tome tagged, "The Establishment of Madame Antonia" is engaged to a Hungarian who, she insists, is a nobleman and to prove it, will show you half of his ring (he has the other half) bearing his crest. Which reminds me, what is there to this story that Gertrude Atherton, now in town here, refuses to be interviewed? Norma Leff and Chick Braus have kissed and made up and Dorothy Dilley, frau of young Louis Kaufman, of the Chatham-Phenix millions, is tired of domesticity and is returning to the stage. Which reminds me that Fae Drake, once Reuben Mamoulian's fiancee, who later married Waldo Edwards and is now the wife of Cecil Holm, is raising rabbits in Westport. Harry Cooper, the booking fella, is bedded with the grippe and Belle Baker cut her hand badly on a razor blade Wednesday nite. Space is running low, but there's still room for a few more odd notes. Thus, I'd like to warn city editors there may be a pippin of a yarn behind the suit just started by Louis Morrison, key witness in the recent bankruptcy investigations, against Archibald Palmer, famous bankruptcy lawyer, with the first hearings scheduled for Monday morning in the Queens Supreme Court. Incidentally, which of the snooty Brokaws is it who's being sued for 16 years back alimony.

Paramount Plans School to Groom Future Stars

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Motion Picture Editor, Universal Service, Inc.

Louella O. Parsons

Los Angeles, April 4—Paramount has put the matter squarely up to Stewart Walker to select new faces and new talent. Mr. Walker, famous stage director and credited with the discovery of such favorites as as Peggy Wood, Kay Francis, Mary Ellis, Charles Starrett, Alexander Kirkland and Blanche Yurka, will start a school on the Paramount lot.

This school is vastly different from the one that educated Buddy Rogers, Josephine Dunn and others at the Paramount studios some six years ago. No amateurs can attend. Mr. Walker will find his pupils among young people who have already shown talent on the stage or in minor screen roles. He will groom them in plays and motion pictures, developing them for important Paramount roles.

The original idea belongs to B. P. Schulberg, who has great respect for Mr. Walker's knowledge of the stage and screen. The title given Mr. Walker will be "creator of stars," and that, my friends, is something new. Am I right?

Will Protest

Barbara Stanwyck

If Barbara Stanwyck ever changes her type of role and goes in for comedy I am going to register a nation-wide protest. There is no one who can be as tragic as Barbara and there is no one who can play these wordly young things with more emotional appeal. Warner Brothers have bought a novel called "They Call It Sin" by Alberta Stadman Egan. Miss Stanwyck was in mind when the story was purchased. It's about a girl whose life is ruined when she finds out she is a foundling, a girl also who loves the wrong man. Sounds very Barbara Stanwyckish, doesn't it?

Takes Over Contract

Carl Laemmle, Jr., has a lot of ideas for Paul Lukas. He borrowed Mr. Lukas for the role of the opera singer in "Strictly Dishonorable," and since that day he has had great respect for the Lukas personality and talents. Paramount probably has lots of respect for Mr. Lukas, also, but there are so many featured Paramount players and so many stars he has never seemed to have as much individual success as he deserves. To make a long story short, Junior Laemmle has taken over the Lukas contract, which has four years to run, and he will find appropriate stories for him.

Hollywood Chatter

Lily Damita is back from Honolulu, tanned and looking like a million. She is all full of enthusiasm over the beautiful isle. The Sidney Smith marriage, Lily says, is just a Hollywood rumor. He returns to New York when she begins work on the Eddie Cantor picture. Little Marian Marsh, I hear from an inside source, has been taken off the Warner Brothers' payroll pending her return to health. She has stayed out of two pictures recently because of the flu. Ruth Chatterton selected her story for her next picture, and within a few hours was on her way to Santa Barbara. She goes to direct "Counselor at Law," the stage play in which her husband, Ralph Forbes, has an important part. Ruthie says she is taking a busy man's holiday.

So was LEW CODY, who came in for his share of admiring stares. MUSHY CALLAHAN, local fighter, celebrating his victory at the Frolics. JOHN WRAY in a blond wig, is getting his money's worth of teasing on the "Dr. X." set. LILY DAMITA sent a telegram to LUPE VELEZ, congratulating her on her "Follies" success. LOWELL SHERMAN contenting himself with playing a director in "The Truth About Hollywood." He will not direct it. DON DILLOWAY on the Columbia lot, winning admiring glances from a certain young woman. Maurice Gives Success Tips

Success is a combination of fate, effort, study and conscience, according to Maurice Chevalier.

"Success has few rules—maybe none," says the international screen star. "Fate plays a big part. One man succeeds one way—another does it a different way.

"It is born in one to succeed, I believe. If you are born with energy and fight in your blood, you just charge on through. Some are born lazy, that is too bad.

"To succeed one must study reasons why some get famous and others fail.

"Then, always do your best. If you don't your conscience will hurt and that will be bad for your progress.

"Above all I think it is best to succeed by playing fair. I would not be happy with success unless it came honestly.

"On the screen success depends on two things—pleasing your audience and pleasing your boss. If you do the former, the latter is certain, for then you bring in good returns for your work.

"I am glad I started from poverty. That now keeps me from being what you call high-hat. That is bad, very bad."

The Cinema Is All Erin's

Ireland has become intensely film conscious. Not only does the cinema thrive in the cities and towns but there is a desire to have the Emerald Isle produce its own pictures on home soil. This wish is widespread, according to Emmett Moore, noted Irish actor and minstrel.

"All my life I have been ambitious of producing Irish pictures," he said. "As my American friends know, heretofore, I have confined myself chiefly to the stage. But when I went overseas last summer, I discovered that my planting of the cinema seed had brought fruit.

"When I talked with bankers and business men generally about my life's ambitions, they quickly took me up. So we organized the Emmett Moore Irish Films Co., Inc., and at once started our first picture. It is "Sweet Inniscarra," the master film of which I brought back with me and now at the Tremont.

"I want to thank Bostonians for the reception they have been giving this, our first venture along these lines."

GIRL MOTHER IS HELD ON CHARGE OF NEGLECT

Miss Evelyn Johnson, unwed mother of Hazel Johnson, 8, who was found dazed and bruised in Milton Friday night, today was arrested for neglect of the child.

The child, who earned the sobriquet of "The Girl Nobody Wanted," when a false identification was reported Saturday, also was technically charged with being "neglected," as a forerunner of a court order to turn her over to the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children.

Miss Johnson was arrested in her home by Special Officer Joseph Curran.

Early Sunday morning, in the Blue Hills station of the Metropolitan police, she denied her father's charge that a former Allston minister was father of the child.

Her denial came after the minister drove to the station with his wife to face the grandfather, Robert Johnson, 50.

Johnson, in Quincy court today, was held in $300 for a hearing April 18 on charges that he left the scene after the door of the car sprung open and the girl fell out.

The name of Starr Faithfull, New York party girl, whose mystery death stirred the country last June, entered the strange case today.

WOMAN LEADER LAUDS GARNER

New York, April 4—John N. Garner would make a highly satisfactory President, in the opinion of Mrs. E. P. Humphrey, prominent Democrat from Louisville, Ky.

Mrs. Humphrey is staying on in New York at the Vanderbilt hotel, following her appearance as speaker at the Jefferson Day banquet, Saturday night.

Despite her high regard for Garner, personally and politically, Mrs. Humphrey said today she is not yet ready to commit herself definitely for any one candidate.

She explained her stand in this way:

"Premature agitation for any particular candidate might hurt the chances of the Democratic party as a whole. And party success is what we all want before anything. We Democrats know the country is ready for a change of administration, and it will be our own fault if we do not select a winner from among the many splendid men who are possible presidential candidates.

"I am ready to back whatever man the party nominates. I hope we Democrats will not waste our strength fighting among ourselves."

Keene Police Chief Fatally Stricken

Keene, N. H., April 4 (AP)—Harry F. Buckminster, chief of police since March 28, 1929, died this morning from shock.

Buckminster was stricken Friday night, after having been on duty during the day. He had been a member of the department 38 years.

RADICAL LABEL PLANNED FOR ROOSEVELT

By LOUIS SEIBOLD.

Washington, April 4—Leaders who think they are on the winners of the two presidential nominations are beginning to count their chickens before the incubators have fully thawed.

Democrats supporting the Roosevelt candidacy have begun to quarrel over the prospective loot. Preliminary skirmishing has brought to light a maneuver of Western origin which, if successful, will compel the New York Governor to wear the radical label—if he should be nominated.

As this maneuver is read by Eastern and Southern leaders, Roosevelt, if nominated, may be compelled to take as his running mate Senator Burton K. Wheeler of Montana, erstwhile I. W. W. agitator and vice-presidential candidate on the La Follette ticket eight years ago.

The Wheeler candidacy by no means measures the extent of Western radical ambitions for a satisfactory split-up of the reward—if Mr. Roosevelt is nominated.

A second plum the Western radicals will undoubtedly demand to convince the country that Roosevelt is a thorough-paced radical is that Senator C. C. Dill of Washington be made national chairman, to succeed John J. Raskob.

Wheeler and Dill have been the most aggressive advocates of the Roosevelt candidacy, and have frequently came in conflict with the Southern viewpoint that Roosevelt is the candidate of that section of the country and not the West. Both claims have some merit.

SOUTH FAVORS FARLEY.

Southern leaders are inclined to accept the suggestion that James A. Farley, field marshal of the Roosevelt forces, be made chairman, or that former Governer Harry Byrd of Virginia should be selected.

The anti-Roosevelt element does not appear to take a serious view of the Western radical maneuverings. The reason is that they are not convinced, by any means, that Roosevelt's momentary advantage will eventually win the nomination.

Republican leaders, reconciled to the prospective free nomination of Mr. Hoover, also began to plan for the future. They have pretty good reason to believe Senator Fess will retire as national chairman.

Gossip About People You Know

GUILFOYLE OUT

William Guilfoyle of the state treasurer's department has been away from his office for several days because of the critical illness of his wife. Mrs. Guilfoyle recently presented her husband with a child.

NEEDS NO PRIVACY

One state official who finds no need for privacy in conducting the affairs of his department is Dr. A. Warren Stearns, commissioner of corrections. One of the busiest of officials, Dr. Stearns does not use a private office but has a desk located in the same room with a group of stenographers and clerks, whose activities do not appear to disturb him.

WORKS FOR UNEMPLOYED

Rep. Eugene P. Durgin, of Boston, is working night and day to obtain work for the unemployed. He is pressing a bill before the legislature to provide employment for additional persons in removal of abandoned hulks along the East Boston waterfront. Also in improving state forest lands and in cutting brush on Metropolitan Park Reservations.

HELP ROOSEVELT

The four male members of the Boston School Committee are making hundreds of friends for Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt of New York, candidate for the Democratic nomination for the presidency. Each of them appears nightly on the public platform and in addition each has sent out thousands of letters to friends and supporters, asking them to elect delegates to the coming national convention who will support the New Yorker.

VISIT ALL HOMES

City Councillor Richard D. Gleason of Ward 9, Roxbury, today instructed his lieutenants to organize committees to visit every home in his district in the interest of candidates for election as delegates to the Democratic national convention who are pledged to Roosevelt.

STILL BIG HEARTED

The big hearted "Jimmy" Curley, of Old Roxbury days, who 30 years ago "hocked" his watch to buy Christmas dinners for the needy, has not changed through the years. On Saturday at City Hall he gave a woman $100 and found a job for her husband. It was just another of those tragic stories. There have been two deaths in the family recently; the oldest girl has diabetes; two of the younger children have rickets; they had neither food nor fuel at home; the installment house was to take the furniture away today, and the father has worked only three days in 14 months.

G. O. P. BOLTER RUNS AS WET

Portland, Me., April 4 (INS)—Edward E. Chase, Portland broker, today announced his candidacy as a "wet" Republican for Maine's First District Congressional seat.

The action followed Chase's denunciation from the Republican Convention floor last week of his party's indorsement of a "dry" plank in its platform. Chase had introduced a resolution calling for a stand for repeal which was killed in committee.

Chase will oppose for the Republican nomination Rep. Carroll L. Beedy, present incumbent.

Judge Joseph E. F. Connolly, Portland attorney, is the Democratic candidate for the First District seat in Congress and is running on a "wet" platform.

Dog Tells World, by Phone, He Wants Breakfast

Waukegan, Ill., April 4 (AP)—A flash of light on the switchboard of the Telephone Exchange was followed by groans when the overator said:

"Number, please."

Receiving nothing but more groans for an answer she called John Hoban, night turnkey at the county jail and connected him with the line, one of those six-party affairs. He, too, hear the groans.

With three deputies he leaped into an automobile and sped from farm to farm, looking for signs of an attempted killing but finding none. At the sixth farm on the telephone line, in a small office building, they finally located the groans.

Smash went the door as the officers crashed against it, and "King," a big police dog, snapped out a hearty welcome.

"King," said F. O. Hutchins, his owner, in explanation, "was just letting the world know he wanted his breakfast and knocked the telephone over. Usually I let him out at 5 a. m., but I was an hour late this morning."

5000 QUIT WORK IN OHIO MINES

St. Clairsville, O., April 4 (AP)—Approximately 5000 men failed to report for work today, answering the state bituminous coal mine strike called by the United Mine Workers of America.

Only four mines in the Eastern Ohio field were working today and officials of the Hanna Coal Company, one of the larger operators, announced they would make no further effort to operate.

GILCHRIST CO. SHOWS BIG GAIN

Gilchrist Company, which during 19 years under its present management has never failed to show a profit, today reported earning $1.08 a share during the past fiscal year, as compared with 36 cents a share the previous year.

For the fiscal year which ended January 31 the company's net profit was $142,501, after inventory write-offs and setting aside of reserves. The balance sheet shows assets of $2,978,871, of which $516,768 is cash, and liabilities of $1,081,000, with capital and surplus of $1,897,870.

KNOW YOUR ELECTRICAL CONTRACTOR AND DEALER

Your own local electrical dealer is "electrical headquarters" for your neighborhood. He carries a complete stock of standard electrical merchandise and offers you a good variety at standard prices. If he does wiring, his work will be thorough and modern, done by skilled, licensed electricians.

THIS IS LIFE

AMERICAN INGENUITY IN A CRISIS AGAIN DEMONSTRATED

By ROBERT E. ROGERS

ONCE AGAIN TOWARDS the end of last week the attention of the American people was focussed momentarily but powerfully on a disaster and a rescue. A few years ago our attention was focussed for many days upon Floyd Collins in his underground prison. He, however, died before the rescuers could reach him. But in the adventure of the little boy in Oklahoma who fell into the drill shaft, the issue was short, sharp, and happy.

PROF. ROGERS

What impressed me most about the whole affair was not the main business of rescue, quick competent and successful as it was, but the side issues. The energy which brought up the steam shovel and then, when it could be used no more, set men a work with power drills in one minute shifts (so hard they labored) was a noteworthy energy. But was it any more noteworthy than the intelligence that helped on the side?

Tribute to American Ingenuity

A telephone line was run out for more than a mile to the edge of the shaft. Electric lights were strung from the mine proper to the drill hole. More than this, a hose was dropped down to the child and fresh air was pumped to him. And when the night drew on and the air grew chill, the air was passed over a series of electric lights that kept it at a 77 degree temperature.

I do not believe that any other people in the world would have thought of that last refinement of efficiency, and, apparently, thought of it as a matter of course, as a sideline to the main business of rescuing the child. The child was to be rescued, of course. But also, he was not to catch pneumonia in the process. In that one gesture the labor of 50 years of preoccupation with health, and a child's health in particular, bore fruit.

Whatever may be said about our American intelligence in those complex problems full of unknown quantities which we call politics and sociology and ethics, there is no doubt about our pre-eminence in matters requiring efficient manipulation of materials for immediate ends, in matters affecting a single problem wherein several factors have to be taken into account. We may fail, but it cannot be said we fail for want of intelligence, ingenuity, efficiency, imagination—all those qualities which the pioneer must have or die, the qualities which frontier breeds in one if one is to surive. And these are the qualities which are lacking in the peoples of old, stagnant, worn out lands.

A year ago the press services brought us an almost unbelievable tale of an accident on a Russian railroad. Many were killed, many more were seriously injured. While waiting for a hospital train to come, the injured were laid out—not on the ground but on the rails of the parallel line. And presently the rescue train came along and killed the injured also.

An Example of Stupidity

This reminds me of a story which Walter B. Pitkin tells in his "History of Human Stupidity." A German farmer in Russia had his wheat threatened by a plague of locusts. He arranged a simple device of string to brush them off. After a few brushings the locusts gave it up and went on to the next field, owned by a Russian peasant. He had seen exactly what his neighbor had done to get rid of the pest. But instead of rigging up his own string he sent for the priest to bless the wheat. He lost his crop.

Pitkins says that after 10,000 years of farming the majority of Russian peasants did not know enough to manure their lands, but dumped the accumulated manure in the Volga. Even today, they have so little ability to handle the farm machinery the government gives them that tractors spend 50 minutes in the shops for every hour of field service. This on the testimony of an American instructor at the Russian-state experimental farm.

"Owning the single greatest tract of farm land on earth, the Slav has worked it for 10,000 years without having contributed a single noteworthy improvement to any branch of agriculture. He has not designed a tool or an implement. He has not hit upon new types of fruit or grains. He has not found fresh and better ways of tilling or of harvesting. The Chinese, the Igorots of the Philippines, the Italian, the French, the German and—above all, of course, the American—have outstripped him in his own exclusive field. And mind you! The Slav has had little else to do in this millennia. In his only specialty he is a failure."

Old Stocks Grow Stagnant

Dr. Pitkin has much the same to say of the Spanish peasant type, who, he says has created nothing, or of the Irish farmer, who starved on potatoes, year after year, until more intelligent people took him in hand and taught him something of modern scientific farming. The man who died only last week, Plunkett, was probably as much responsible for Ireland's present increase of prosperity as any single person.

Dr. Pitkin's theory seems to be that very old racial stocks that exist for thousands of years in the same spot, without the vitalizing influence of other stocks, grow stagnant and stupid and rapidly degenerate in the human scale. Transplanted into other conditions these stocks improve enormously. Put them in the highly competitive modern city life, put them up against the hard and selective process of pioneer life, vitalize them with fresh blood, and you will find the old peasant stupidity giving way to that quick and efficient ingenuity and creative imagination which I have noted at the beginning of the column.

These people out at the mouth of the drill hole in Oklahoma probably do not show any more intelligence in the management of their political affairs than any similar group in the old world. They are probably as much under the thumb of their local political bosses as is the moujik under the Soviet or the vine grower under the terror of local Fascism. In their social philosophy they may be no more enlightened. But one thing America has done for them. It has taught them the quick inventive efficiency they displayed in rescuing that lost child. It has taught them the art of instinctive co-operation, every man a leader and a follower at once.

That is perhaps the most hopeful beginning that has ever been made in the age-old and world-wide war against human helplessness in the face of necessity. It is the precursor of greater success.

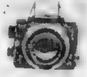
Skunk's Attack Gives Policeman Holiday

The uniform of Patrolman Sylvester Mead of Belmont police hung out on the line in the rear of his home all yesterday, because of his encounter with a party of prowling polecats and Mead enjoyed a day of rest.

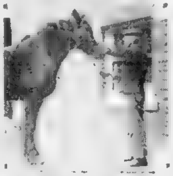
Woman Sues City for $10,000 After Fall

Suit for $10,000 has been in Federal court filed against the city of Boston by Helena Wiklund, subject of Sweden, for alleged injuries sustained by her when she fell in a hole near her home in Dearborn st. Roxbury. Her counsel is Charles Milled.

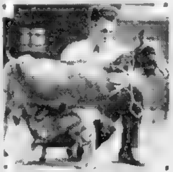
At Animal Hospital With the Candid Camera



All the wonders of Boston will never be told. I am finding them each day. Now, the fellow who orders me to go places was told by George Underwood, Sports Editor, how his dog, Pep, was cured at the Angell Memorial Hospital. So I go to the great animal hospital. They treat all types of domestic animals here.



The bright eyes and smile of James Blakely gave this horse pep. I could tell when I shot this picture. The old-timer, annoyed by present-day automobilists, is in for a health checkup.



You didn't see this baby's birth recorded at City Hall. The mother goat came to the hospital and the baby was born. All is well. Harold Marena held nervous mama for me as baby goat lunched.

Gee, could you imagine that they have visiting hours at the Angell Memorial? They have, for I snapped Raymond Warren, Brookline, while he was visiting his dog, Ritzie. Ritzie hurt that right back leg. It's in a cast.

Every dog, cat or any animal is welcomed at this hospital. Thomas Kolarich of Brookline was snapped as he was arriving for a clinic with his dog, Pud.

SOCIETY WOMAN FIGHTS TO GAIN FREEDOM

Mrs. Beal Claims Agent Vanished With $22,000 in Loan Security Gems

With calm disregard of her surroundings, Mrs. Lida Beal, Needham society matron, waited behind bars in the Charles st. jail today while her attorneys planned a Supreme Court appeal to obtain her release.

By order of the court she must remain in the jail until a $10,000 debt is paid to an aged South End lodging house keeper, but Mrs. Beal claims she is "broke" and unable to pay any part of the loan.

The court's action is based on information that Mrs. Beal had $22,000 worth of jewelry given her as security on loans to wealthy women in anticipation of their husbands' allowances.

It was her method, according to testimony, to obtain money for the loans from elderly women, among them Mrs. Lavinia Nelson, 70, of Appleton st., South End, the complainant.

SAYS GEMS VANISHED

In an interview with the Boston Evening American Mrs. Beal declared she gave the jewelry to a New York diamond dealer to turn into cash so that her obligations could be met.

The dealer, she said, disappeared soon after he took the jewelry and she has been unable to find him though she made several trips to New York and New Jersey in her search.

Atty. E. Russell Greenhood, counsel for Mrs. Beal, said that his appeal would be based on the fact that no evidence was placed before the court that she was in possession of any money or jewelry.

Wearing a black crepe gown Mrs. Beal walked through the rotunda of the jail where a dozen prisoners, some charged with murder, were talking with visitors. She greeted her lawyer calmly and inquired about her two children, one a 13-year-old girl student in fashionable Bradford academy and a boy 11.

She was mildly disturbed at reports that she was given a [illegible] dress of gray and assigned to work in the sewing room.

DENIES PLOT TO CHEAT

"As a matter of fact," she said. "I asked to be given some sort of work, but the terms of my imprisonment forbid it. I do nothing but read in here and as you see I am not wearing prison garb.

"I feel that I have been done a serious injustice and there is nothing I can do but wait until it has been righted. Like everyone in business I suffered with the collapse of the stock market.

"In the 14 years during which I conducted a loan business no one lost a penny of their investments and I handled upward of $200,000 in that time.

Mrs. Nelson's contract with me was held invalid by Supreme Court but at no time have I given any indication that I would not repay her loan. Had the jewelry which I had given to the New York dealer been transformed into cash and turned over to me Mrs. Nelson would have been paid."

BEHREND WILL BARES LOSSES

Light was shed on the [illegible] of Bernard A. Behrend of Wellesley, world famous inventor and engineer, when his will was filed in probate court at Dedham today with a codicil indicating he had lost considerable money.

Behrend, who was 56, shot himself through the heart in his home on Clifford rd. on March 25.

The Boston Safe Deposit & Trust Co. and William T. [illegible] of Erie, Pa., his brother-in-law, were named executors.

The codicil was dated Jan. 6, 1932. In it Behrend named his wife executor, adding:

"In view of the greatly reduced principal which I am now able to bequeath, I desire all bequests to be made at the discretion of my wife."

WOMAN IS TRIED AS SLAYER

While her two children wept Mrs. Michelina Filipiak of Arlington st., Chelsea, went on trial today in Suffolk Superior Criminal Court charged with the murder of her husband, Wadislaw.

Dressed in a black coat trimmed with fur, a green dress and black close-fitting hat, Mrs. Filipiak heard 26 jurors called before Judge James H. Sisk.

The state claims that on November 28, 1930, Mrs. Filipiak killed her husband by administering arsenic.

Jessie, 7, and Stella, 12, the two children, sat in the second row behind their mother and, with wondering eyes that brimmed tears incessantly, sobbed:

"Mamma, mamma. What [illegible] they doing to mamma?"

When the 26th juror was called, exhausting the panel, Judge Sisk ordered a recess until a second panel was summoned from another session.

Plans Made to Relieve Shore Traffic

The State Department of Public Works is making a survey in connection with a proposed new highway between Beverly and West Gloucester.

Surveyors are attempting to determine a good location through the back woods in order to relieve part of the heavy North Shore traffic.

According to officials of the highway division construction of the road will probably begin within two years.

It is understood the city of Gloucester plans to rebuild the road from West Gloucester to Magnolia to hook up with the new highway and make it easier for summer residents to reach their estates.

JUDGE WARNS NEW CITIZENS

Judge Hugh D. McLellan told 75 women and 80 men in Federal court today to become active participants in making and changing the laws of the country.

It was his initial appearance in the naturalization session, and he welcomed the new citizens in a short talk on the duties of citizenship.

"You have come here, having expressed a desire to become citizens of the United States," said Judge McLellan. "By so doing, you assume the obligations incumbent on every citizen of the country.

"Among other obligations in which you are expected to join with every other citizen, is the necessity of becoming active participants in making and changing the laws. Inform yourselves what ought to be done by you as citizens.

"Having accepted the laws as they now are, you will do what you think you ought to do in upholding them."

Hurley Wins Post

FIRE IN STORES SNARLS TRAFFIC

A two-alarm fire, starting in the basement of a grocery store at 1126 Blue Hill ave., Dorchester, today and spreading to three other stores in the same block, caused a tie-up of traffic for nearly an hour. Damage was estimated at $8000.

According to Deputy Fire Chief James W. Mahoney, the fire started from a defective furnace pipe. Samuel Garman, owner of the store, told fire officials he had started a fire when the pipe fell. The flames spread to the ceiling and walls.

Garman said he attempted to extinguish the flames and while so doing his clothes caught fire. He beat out the flames and sounded the alarm.

The other stores affected by the fire were the Max Miller Market at 1122; Simons Sisters Hat Shop, 1124; Modern Barber Shop, 1128, and the G. & E. Delicatessen, 1130 Blue Hill ave.

While fighting the blaze another alarm came in for a fire on the piazza of the three-story dwelling at 4 Norfolk ter., a half-mile away.

SAWYER HITS AT STATE EXPENSE

A commission to investigate the question of effecting savings in the cost of State government, including possible temporary reduction of certain salaries, was sought by Representative Sawyer of Ware today.

He filed an order with the clerk of the House for appointment of a commission of nine members, four from the House, two from the Senate and three to be named by the Governor, to be known as the Emergency Commission, and to report to the next Legislature.

The order states that a part of the saving "may be a temporary reduction in certain salaries, and also to see if it is possible for closer co-operation between the State and the municipalities in meeting the unemployment situation and disbursing public welfare aid."

FEDERAL MEN 'SIT IN' ON TRIAL HERE

One of Defendants Involved in the Theft of Boat; Code Books, Charts Studied

Nine members of an alleged Boston rum-running syndicate were "tied up" with interests at Chicago and Paterson, N. J., today when they were arraigned in Municipal Court on charges of breaking and entering.

Arrested Saturday night in a Federal st. office building, the nine faced the break charge under state laws, while customs, prohibition, Department of Justice and coast guard officials sat in court.

The latter are interested in code books, charts of the New England coast, liquor price lists, navigation guides, statistics on industrial alcohol, and bills to customers that ranged to $13,000, seized during the raid.

INVOLVED IN BOAT THEFT

The alleged Chicago and Paterson man was named as Joseph Anselmo, who gave an address in Broadway, Somerville, when he was arrested.

Police told Judge Adlow they learned Anselmo was connected with liquor interests in both places.

Mario N. Ingraffia, 45, of Dorset rd., Newton, is under indictment in federal court and is charged in a default warrant with theft of a rum boat on Mile rd., Dorchester, after a spectacular seizure more than a year ago.

Ingraffia, who police said admitted he was manager of the Federal st. office of "John E. Becker, importer and jobber," where the raid took place, was recognized by Lieut. Cornelius Shea as one of the men arrested in the Mile rd. seizure.

He was one of several, Shea said, who quickly obtained bail and later was suspected of stealing the captured but unguarded craft.

CHARGED WITH BURGLARY

In Federal court Ingraffia is due for trial tomorrow on a charge of conspiracy to violate the prohibition act.

With James J. Waldron of Commonwealth ave. and Richard I. Bailey of Dover rd., Somerville, Ingraffia was held in $1000 today for hearing April 18 on the charge of breaking and entering the sporting goods store of Swift & Anderson, Federal st.

Anselmo, Frank Henning of New Bedford, Harry Smith of Dorchester, Joseph Ingraffia of Revere, Michael Alebense of Waltham and Frank Damio of Paterson, N. J., were charged with receiving stolen goods. All the charges involved four binoculars owned by the sporting goods house.

POLICE SEEK DELAY

Investigation of a gun found on Ingraffia revealed that he was licensed in Revere but lived in Newton, police say.

Sergts. Patrick Flannery and John McFarland, Special Officers Gorey, Donovan and Kearns, all of Milk st. station, asked two weeks' continuance, but were granted a week.

Society, Museum Benefit by Will

The Massachusetts Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals and the Museum of Fine Arts will divide about $39,000 under the will of Octavia Dupee of Wellesley which was filed in Norfolk County probate court at Dedham today.

The bond filed by the executors, the Boston Safe Deposit & Trust Co. and Dudley H. Dorr of Lancaster, reveal the estate to be approximately $50,000. A legacy of $5000 goes to Massachusetts General Hospital and $6000 to friends.

DEAN ARCHER DEFENDS EVENING LAW SCHOOL STUDENTS

EQUALITY OF OPPORTUNITY DEMANDED

Suffolk Law School Head Analyzes Situation in Bar Examinations

In Rhode Island, Connecticut and many other states applicants for the bar who have trained in evening schools or part-time schools are refused permission to take the examinations. In Massachusetts last January out of 543 evening law school graduates 451 were rejected—a success average of 19 per cent, whereas in January, 1926, graduates of the same schools made an average of 61 per cent. Dean Archer analyzes the situation as he sees it

By GLEASON L. ARCHER, LLD.,
Dean Suffolk Law School, Boston

The fate of 100 boys is about to be decided.

"How many of you have parents who can afford to send you to colleges and universities?"

Four of them raise their hands. The other 96 are ordered to depart. Some of them hesitate.

"But if we educate ourselves by home study, by evening schools, may we not study law, or medicine, or science or theology?"

"No. That is old stuff. Abe Lincoln is dead. God has given up that kind of business. Education after the sun goes down does not count any more. If you can't go to the university, that is your hard luck. We must protect our public against uneducated riff-raff."

PROOF IN FIGURES

Is this a fanciful picture? Consult government statistics and you will find that only four boys out of every 100 who enter the public schools ever secure enough academic training to satisfy the so-called Bar Association Standards. In other words, 96 per cent of the young men of the nation would be doomed for life if the universities could secure an exclusive monopoly of legal education.

In the present series of articles I propose to unfold the story of one of the most amazing conspiracies against the rights of the common people ever staged in America. It involves men high in university circles, men who have employed the arts of Psychology and the latest developments in camouflage and propaganda to accomplish their ends.

Millions have been deluded and misled. Some of the most militant workers for the cause of university monopoly are themselves the victims of false propaganda.

The central theme will naturally be the astounding conduct of our own board of bar examiners, yet the sinister facts in the background are necessary to a proper understanding of the local situation. Whether the examiners are consciously or unconsciously playing the game of the university men is quite beside the point, provided we can prove that they are playing the game.

CHANCE FOR ALL

Until recent years, except for an interval prior to 1838, the youth of the land have had an unquestioned right to secure education in any way possible. Having secured that education they were at liberty to make use of it in the furtherance of whatever worthy ambition may have inspired them thus to strive for education.

That principle of democracy has given us nearly all of the supremely great men of the nation's history. Benjamin Franklin, Patrick Henry, George Washington and John Marshall were conspicuous illustrations of self-educated leaders who played great parts in shaping the nation's destiny. In the latter period we find Henry Clay, Andrew Jackson and Abraham Lincoln as men whom the universities of the land could not match for talents of leadership. In fields of industry, especially in automobile manufacturing, non-college men are to-

Yet selfishly disregarding the lessons of history, the universities of the nation set out 30 years ago to exclude from the learned professions all except their own graduates. In ten years time between 1904 and 1914, they captured the medical profession. In 1915 they set out to duplicate their exploit by capturing the legal profession.

So cleverly has this whole affair been managed, and so thoroughly has the nation been deceived by propaganda that for five years I have been struggling in vain for a hearing in order to present the facts from official records. In showing up the bar examination tangle in Massachusetts it is now necessary to show up the national movement also.

One of the most successful bits of propaganda in the campaign since 1920—a statement now universally believed—is that the profession of law is overcrowded.

According to official figures recently issued by the Section of Legal Education of the American Bar Association, there was one lawyer for every 835 persons in the United States in 1930, which means 33 per cent less in proportion to population than in 1900.

HUNDREDS VIE FOR POETIC HONORS

DOCTOR IS HELD IN AUTO CRASH

Dr. Harold F. Norton, 31, of Austin st., Hyde Park, was arrested by Brockton police early today shortly after his auto collided with one operated by Carroll G. Robbins, of Middleboro.

He was charged with drunkenness, operating under the influence of liquor, driving so as to endanger and leaving the scene of an accident without making himself known.

Brockton police said the auto operated by Dr. Norton had sideswiped Robbins' machine and gone into a ditch, where it overturned. Occupants of the Robbins auto claimed Dr. Norton was alone in the car and that he climbed from the wreckage and offered to settle for the damage without admitting he was the driver.

He is then alleged to have left the scene before the arrival of police. While police officers were at the scene a wrecking car arrived and prepared to take the Norton machine away. Police followed the wrecker back to the garage and arrested Norton nearby.

35,000 ATTEND MOTOR SHOW

More than 35,000 people on Saturday visited the General Motors National Exhibit at Boston Garden, it was announced today. The exhibit continues the rest of the week.

From the moment Mayor Curley parted the ribbon which officially opened the exhibit a steady stream of visitors poured through the doors until well after the designated closing time, to view the latest models of Chevrolet, Pontiac, Oldsmobile, Buick and Cadillac. Women visitors were particularly interested in the display of Frigidaire and Delco home products.

Many notables of Boston's social and civic activities were visitors.

The first day crowd is especially gratifying, according to W. J. Gravenson, general chairman of the Boston exhibit.

"Unquestionably the exhibit of all General Motors products under one roof and at one time will do much to stimulate business here," said Mr. Graveson. "It will bring to the personal attention of thousands of show visitors the beauty, quality and values obtainable this year at moderate cost.

DEADLINE NEAR IN POETRY CONTEST

Have you a poet in your home? Evidently, from the deluge of poems pouring in to the Tony Wons poem contest editor of the Boston Evening American almost every family can answer that question in the affirmative.

By the hundreds, poems come in—and one of these will be selected as the best of the lot by Tony Wons himself.

CASH AWARD FOR WINNER

A cash award will be made for this best poem by the RKO Keith Boston Theater and the author will see and hear Tony broadcast the winning poem from the WNAC studios next Thursday morning during the regular nationwide broadcast of "Tony's Scrapbook."

Ten runners-up in the contest, picked by the judges, who include Tony, Morton Downey, Jacques Renard and a member of the Evening American staff, will receive two guest tickets to the Keith-Boston as well as an autographed copy of one of Tony's books.

JAMAICA PLAIN ENTRANT

The following poem, submitted by William H. Ballou of 28 Cheshire st., Jamaica Plain, is one of the thousands already received:

Now I came upon a river just at twilight,
And o'er the bridge did start to pass along
But I thought I heard the murmur of the waters,
"Oh, but stay and hear the sweetness of my song.

"Hear the music of my softly-singing ripples
"As my tides caress the verdant, sloping shore.
"Feel the power of my slow, pulsating current,
"Which is straining to the waterfall to roar.

"There are silent nights when I do flow so calmly,
"Lulled to rest by Nature's sweet nocturnal lullaby.
"You can see the shining image of eternal, boundless beauty—

Remember, the contest ends tomorrow and the judges will be busy between their personal appearances at the RKO Keith's Boston and picking the winners.

Mail your poems immediately—today—to the Tony Wons Contest Editor, Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop sq., Boston.

FLAG DISPLAY IS URGED BY ELY ON ARMY DAY

Display of flags was today urged by Gov. Ely in observance of Army Day, April 6.

His statement read:

"'The day has come when America is privileged to spend her blood and her might for the principles that gave her birth and happiness and the peace which she has treasured. God helping her, she can do no other.'

"Thus spoke the President of the United States to the Congress on the 2d of April, 1917, and on the 6th of April following came the declaration of war, now designated as Army Day. This day must remain a day of sacred rememberance through the years to be.

"Following the example of the President of the United States, I am very glad to express again sincere appreciation of all those who participated in the great conflict.

"May I suggest to the citizens of the Commonwealth that the flag be displayed on their places of business and at their homes on this anniversary day, April 6, in appreciation of service to mankind."

'JUST FRIENDS' MORE THAN MUSICAL SCORE TO RADIO TRIO; QUARTER-HOUR STARS REAL PALS

Downey, Wons, Renard Trio Unusual

By N. F. T.

Meet three Microphone Musketeers. Brought together by radio development of the past two years, Morton Downey, Tony Wons and Jacques Renard have achieved singular success as an entertaining ethereal trio. They have just as surely become one to the other, as the lyric of an inspiring musical score they often offer—Just Friends.

THREE IN ONE

This genuine fondness for one another is as outstanding as their broadcasting fame. They sincerely respect the individual talents possessed by each. To very closely observe this bond of friendship, struck your and their interviewer as likely to reveal something worth relating in the way of radio romance. Sure enough, that's what happened.

Saturday morning the boys had been busier than the factory which makes cigarettes they exploit on the air. An overnight railroad jump from Albany landed them in our midst for a week's engagement in person at the Keith Boston Theater. Stage settings, microphones, loud speakers, amplifiers and trunk after trunk were moved into the Washington st. entertainment emporium. The three principals hastened to meet those people shining stars must always meet.

An elaborate breakfast, attended by ladies and gentlemen of the press, presided over by Mayor Curley, furnished the opportunity for Mort, Tony and Jacques to exchange greetings in their best "mighty glad to be here" manner. While others were occupied over Grape Fruit, Oatmeal, Sausage, Eggs, Toast and Coffee, these three troupers of the Camel Caravan compared notes. They smilingly acknowledged every good wish, handshake and smile. They also spoke to the radio audience (WNAC) between 10.15 and 10.30, though their minds and hearts were centered as one, on the all important first curtain call due for 11.26 a. m. At a signal from Morton, all three graciously took leave of the assembled scribes and scribesses, hustling from Copley Square to don stage attire. Away they went, thumbing watches and chattering conscientiously as would three eagles perched on a mountain peak impatient to take wing.

SHARING THE SPOTLIGHT

Remembering this last glimpse of Downey, Wons and Renard, it seemed somewhat strange to sit watching them calmly make their first footlight appearance as a trio in Boston. They occupied the spotlight alternately throughout, commanding equal applause. That enthusiastic token of high esteem came thundering over to them aplenty. Each was certainly three times happier than any one would have been alone.

So here again was demonstrated the existing fellowship between the three. At every opportunity the beloved loudspeaker lads acknowledged unusual hand clapping by executing generous gestures in the direction of one another. Wholehearted and unselfish sharing of honors such as one is privileged to witness while mingling with Morton Downey, Tony Wons and Jacques Renard, is truly rare. One of the most apparent characteristics among many headline personally partnerships has always been a sort of individual eagerness to claim at least some slight measure of superiority or pronounced measure of popularity. Not so with these Quarter Hour stars. They afford gratifying reflection of the spirit that brought theatrical fortunes and international fame to such names as Weber and Fields, Montgomery and Stone, Williams and Walker, Van and Schenck and a few, all too few, more.

SUCCESS NO ACCIDENT

In radioland, as on the stage, friendships are fleeting. It might not be a far cry to assume that lasting successes are not more numerous because of the fact. There is a very good reason for making friendship the highlight of this particular bit about Morton Downey, Tony Wons and Jacques Renard. After the early morning meeting, after the first presentation of their stage offering and lastly following their work in the theater for the opening day, they promptly sat down together once more for the usual huddle. Listening in (were we listenin'?) on suggestions made to each other in kindly constructive tones, a powerful fact became definitely established. Success with such favorites among countless thousands of radio fans, is no accident. Coming together as they did not quite two years ago, may have been. Fate, however, if we may believe there is such a thing, must have had more than a little to do with the forming of this particular friendship. Men and women in all walks of life might well bear in mind the binding bond while tuning in on the Triumvirate this evening and others to come. At least one writer learned a lot just watching them work.

PERSONALITIES ON THE AIR

In radio studios, staff members stand by to direct the performing artists by means of gestures. F'rinstance, two fingers pressed against the nose informs the artist the p'gram is running according to schedule.

S'funny, this same gesture, when made by the list'r, has an entirely different significance.

When a staff man waves a closed fist at the artist, it's the signal to get ready to finish.

When a list'r makes this gesture he likewise desires the artist conclude—but again for a different reason.

But always remember, dear list'r, when you visit a studio, never make the above mentioned gestures at the artists because, altho, it may be criticism on your part, the artists may think you're giving directions.

Lost 20 Lbs. of Fat In Just 4 Weeks

Mrs. Mae West of St. Louis, Mo., writes: "I'm only 28 yrs. old and weighed 170 lbs. until taking one box of your Kruschen Salts just 4 weeks ago. I now weigh 150 lbs. I also have more energy and furthermore I've never had a hungry moment."

Fat folks should take one half teaspoonful of Kruschen Salts in a glass of hot water in the morning before breakfast, cut down on pastry and fatty meats—go light on potatoes, butter, cream and sugar—it's the SAFE, harmless way to reduce as tens of thousands of men and women know.

For your health's sake ask for and get Kruschen at any drug store—the cost for a bottle that lasts 4 weeks is but a trifle and if after the first bottle you are not joyfully satisfied with results—money back.

Judith Is Happy Over Her New Job and Admires the Young and Handsome Boss

MAY CHRISTIE

uthor of "High Speed Girl" and Other Famous Novels

danced on the keys of Judith's ewriter till each disc twinkled a tiny star and it flowed over ith's desk as though it sought draw out all the perfume of a ay of lily-of-the-valley that uty-loving Judith had stuck in lass of water that morning.

Judith's busy fingers lay for a ment idle in her lap, those Irish y eyes of hers that were the hest feature in her face resting the list of closed accounts she been typing out for Mr. Barry ne of the business department. ven as she looked at it the dscap sheet set in her typewriter med to fade, and in its place the d-looking face of Mr. Barry ne himself rose nebulously behind her. A pang that was half half thrill, caught Judith's rt so that she gave a little thless gasp, and closed her eyes though to shut the disturbing sion out—but there it was, clearer than ever before her!

RIDICULOUS!

Why, of course, it was ridiculous, she told herself that she shouldn't ever give a second thought to a man who had never shown anything more towards her than the ordinary courtesies of business.

Judith had been quite happy up to now without particularly wanting to be loved, or letting her thoughts dwell seriously on marriage. She had listened with a sort of detached wonder, up in the big rest-and-recreation room at the top of the bank, when giggling girls would gossip about their "crushes." She had thought that the feminine urge they felt—and showed—to be admired and stroked and petted and made much of by the opposite sex was really rather foolish.

Her work, and her plans for the future, combined with the fact that she had achieved New York at last, and that surely it was the most nderful city in the world for an bitious girl to be a part of, had sorbed Judith. She had the appy faculty of enjoying little ings to the full. And her six onths here had been brimful of ovelty and interest.

It had been hard to get away from home, to leave the little town state where she had lived for [illegible] ars and where she had taken her siness course—hard not only in financial sense, but because her mother had worried so about her oing.

Mrs. Brian had behaved exactly ke the hen who hatched the duckling in the story when her duckling swam away from her, Judith had told her mother, laughing.

AMBITION REALIZED.

But one the first part of Judith's ambition had been realized, and a ndred miles lay between her and shabby little house that was her me, and there was no fond, in lgent mother to run to with her ubles, Judith was downright mesick. There were surprises in re for her, too. Studying the s in the newspapers every day, d making the long rounds from ce to office in search of work, dith discovered—among other ngs—that unless one had a back und of other jobs or a first-class er of recommendation it wasn't an easy thing to land a secre position in this city!

the more, then, had she ap iated the lucky break that had ted her as stenographer-bookeper in the Knickerbocker bank. e had been so thrilled by her independence and her work er weekly pay envelope, that ad put thoughts of men into ackground.

s she sat at her desk on this rnoon of late January, for a e moment lost in her reverie of ry Deane, it seemed to her there something heartbreakingly ely about the smell of the lilyhe-valley. It made her long for ngs she hadn't thought about be s . . . sweet intimate things that re beyond her reach in Barry's . . . her heart raced and the orld seemed breathlessly beauti l.

She had dreamed of Barry Deane ast night. She had dreamed they ere alone in the office and that arry had kissed her. She had wakened at 5 in the morning in er little room in the boarding se in Brooklyn, and told herelf she was a fool—a sentimental ool—that there was no reason in the world why Barry should look at her. Wasn't he—although only 27—already one of the assistant vice-presidents in the new Business Department of the bank and making $150 a week. He was crazy about his work, they said and in line for further promotion.

WENT TO PARTIES.

Judith had heard that he lived in a small hotel uptown on the fashionable East side and that he even went to parties which the family of the president of the bank attended.

With his [illegible] looks and quiet [illegible] he would [illegible] far she knew. "Don't let yourself even think of him, you idiot!"—and Judith shook herself angrily.

To possess oneself—to be free—not to care for anyone to the point where one could be upset or hurt by them—to diffuse one's interest over a variety of people and things, but to take everything and everybody lightly—that was the right way to be.

It was her friend Zella's attitude to life, frequently expounded to Judith in their bedroom talks at the Brooklyn boarding house where the two girls had chummed up and Judith thought, provided one could live up to it, that it was a remarkably sane and sensible philosophy.

"All the unfairness and worry and agonizing in the world come because people care too much," Zella had insisted. "One's mind and one's life should be one's own. Free. The minute one begins to suffer through love—and one always does—love becomes despicable."

Zella at 30, had cast love out of her scheme of things. "Whenever you try to possess anyone or anything, the minute you close your hand on it, that thing just slips through your fingers like sand," she had assured Judith.

AT HER DESK.

But as Judith sat at her desk with that blessed yellow ray from the sky flowing around her like sunlit water and the lily-of-the-valley smelling like a springtime garden, Zella's credo, that had seemed so clever, seemed now like a chilly way of meeting life.

Love! Sooner or later everyone came to it. Just because Zella—who was eight or nine years older than Judith—had been bruised and disappointed by things that had happened to her, was no argument for other people's release from all intense emotion, for Judith to deny realities, to run away from life.

It seemed as though there were two Judiths sitting there, arguing with each other—a rather hard, intelligent young woman, self-sufficient—and a tremulously questing Judith.

She was aroused from her moment of reverie by the voice of the manager of her department. He approved of Judith's work and had recommended her for an increase in salary in the five and a half months she had been with him.

"Mr. Deane wants that list, so if it's ready, take it over to him, Miss Brian, please."

With accelerated pulse and a wild-rose flush replacing the gardenia pallor of her face, Judith passed through the swing doors and down the long corridor to the new Business branch, thrilled that she was going to see Barry. He had wanted her to come herself. It would have been so easy for him to have sent one of the junior clerks or his office boy over for the list, she argued.

As she turned to the right at the end of the passage that had its innumerable little glass fronted cells on either side, all the way along she caught her breath at sight of the tall, finely-built figure of Barry Deane himself standing in his own doorway. He was talking to two girls—two expensively fur-coated smartly shod and hatted girls—and as Judith with sinking heart approached, she heard one of them say, with the prettiest little laugh in the world and tilting an appealingly pretty profile up to the young man: "But you must come to the party tonight, Barry. I insist on your coming."

He was evidently demurring for the speaker, with a fascinating little pout, turned to the second girl, exclaiming: "Betty, if he won't do it for me, you make him!" . . . and Judith in a quick glimpse saw that Number One's full face was even lovelier than her profile. Her forehead was as smooth as a baby's. Her eyes were darkly blue and very large. Under her tip-tilted little nose her mouth formed a perfect Cupid's bow, oddly seductive. Little blonde curls, like yellow question marks, fluttered from the point where her dashing little hat was pulled down over her ears.

STOOD VERY CLOSE

She stood there, very close to Barry pouting and chirping up into his face.

Judith, hesitating and embarrassed, was about to give the list to a passing office-boy when Barry saw her and came forward and took the list from her hand with a brisk nod and a: "Thank you, Miss Brian."

Judith went back to her office and started to tidy up her desk. She suddenly felt tired. The lily-of-the-valley had a wilted air. The sunshine had gone.

The Beauty Box

IT IS only when the body is healthy and strong that eyes are at their best. Their beauty depends upon general tip-topness and their expressions vary with every thought and mood. Sparkling eyes signify an active mentality and a constitution that is in a state of well being.

NO NEED to worry about hair that splits at the ends. Only hair that grows its normal length is up to that trick. Nature is shedding dead tissue for which she hasn't any use. Clipping is as good as singeing. All that talk about hair bleeding is a lot of bunkum.

Deformities in Rickets Due to Neglect

By DR. R. S. COPELAND

SCIENCE has found ways to prevent the marked deformities which were so common in former years. Unfortunately, however, curvatures of the spine, bowed legs and knock knees are still by no means uncommon, and this is particularly true among children in the crowded districts of our larger cities.

Dr. Copeland

Rickets is a chief cause of such deformities. This is known to the doctors as a "deficiency disease," and is due to the lack of certain mineral substances in the blood. Infants after the age of four months and up to the age of two years are commonly affected. The softness of the bones is so great as to cause deformities of the head and of the long bones, especially those of the legs.

The first sym[illegible] of rickets [illegible] baby is usually an absence of tone in the skin. This results in profuse sweating, sometimes confined to the head, but at times affecting the entire body. The mother notices that the [illegible] pillow is wet after the [illegible] and is at a loss to account for the fact.

Soon the baby becomes restless at night and is irritable and cries when handled. If these danger signs are neglected the muscles become flabby and the abdomen protuberant, and indigestion, constipation or bronchitis may develop. Weak, thin [illegible] children are most frequently the sufferers from rickets, but fat, overweight children are not free from it by any means.

Lack of sunshine is a great factor. A child cannot prosper with poor hygienic home conditions, while a diet deficient in vitamins is considered responsible in many cases for these symptoms. The winter season, with its bad weather and absence of sunlight, furnishes by far the larger number of cases.

The prevention of rickets is far easier than its cure. If sunshine is not to be had, one of the sunlamps will act as an excellent substitute. A treatment at least two or three times a week has proved most helpful to the little patients.

Fresh air and a diet rich in vitamin D are essential to the child's welfare. Vitamin D, the "sunshine vitamin," is found in milk, orange juice, eggs and cod liver oil. The diet of the younger babies should include the vegetable water—the "pot likker." Strained vegetables for the other children are very beneficial.

'Hide, Seek' in Ice Box Popular

By MARTHA LEE

From Martha Lee's Monday Morning Broadcast Over Station WAAB

NOT MENTIONED by the sporting editors, and yet one of our major indoor sports, national in scope and popularity, is the time-honored game of pantry-peeking, or "Ice-Box Hide and Seek."

The sport is favored by my whole family at any hour of the [illegible] when the [illegible] of dinner have worn off and thoughts of midnight prowlers begin to fill the head of the veteran Rummager.

Husbands and sons are ardent fans of this sport and are as apt as not to carve right into the half of the duck you are treasuring [illegible]

2 tbsps. quick tapioca
2 cups canned tomatoes, strained

⅛ tsp. pepper.
¼ tsp. mustard
¼ tsp. Worcestershire sauce

Add [illegible] tomato [illegible] double boiler [illegible] clear, stirring frequently. Add cheese gradually and stir until melted. Remove from fire, add dried beef and seasoning and allow to cool before spreading on bread. Makes 2½ cups filling.

'Alimoniacs' Spoil Bride Market

By HELEN ROWLAND

BEWARE [illegible] mean the YOUNG grass widow with plenty of time and money on her hands.

Alimony seekers (I call them "alimoniacs") are spoiling the marriage market for all the nice marrying girls these days, declares May Christie, popular columnist.

Grass widows with plenty of "unearned increment" (alimony pay dirt) and nothing to do but spend their days in the beauty parlors and their evenings dancing, vamping and giving cocktail parties are a menace to matrimony.

A man is easily frightened; and he is naturally wary of a proposition which looks like nothing but a honeymoon trip to Bermuda or Niagara Falls followed by a life sentence to alimony jail!

Here's a bouquet to that new law refusing alimony to all able-bodied, childless women under 25—proposed by some wise solon—and I hope passed by this time.

No humane person would deny alimony to a [illegible] wife whose husband has been seized with a flapper complex or a stepping complex in his forties and fifties, and wants to junk her for a brand new model.

But these husky, beautiful, youngish, childless women who are living in luxurious bachelorette apartments on ONE man's hard earned money, while they give their smiles their time their dances and their kisses to OTHER men and snatch all the eligibles from the girls, are just barnacles on the Ship of State, who should be scraped off.

With plenty of attractive women on his telephone list, no ties or financial responsibilities, plenty of free dinner parties, cocktails and free kisses, why should a bachelor sign on the dotted line?

No wonder modern men fight marriage and can't be dragged to the altar until or unless they fall so head-over-heels in love that they can't see where they are going.

Don't Worry at 16, Protests Miss Fairfax

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

DEAR MISS FAIFAX:

We are two girl friends [illegible] years [illegible] considered [illegible] ing and attractive, but the boys do not seem to pay any attention to us. We are not dead sticks at parties [illegible] you help us?

LONESOME AND BLUE.

Dear Lonesome: Don't expect to acquire worldly wisdom at the tender age of 16, my dears. A girl must learn the technique of amusing and holding friends just as she has to learn how to play bridge or [illegible]. I'm glad you don't drink. As for parties, try small ones—a foursome for a game of cards, or an afternoon [illegible] with a little [illegible] afterwards. Sixteen is entirely too

He Meets With Opposition

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a young man of 24, have a good job with an insurance company, and a car but with all this I can't have the girl I want. She is 18. I have asked her to go out with me several times, but she says her family thinks I am too old. I am tall and quite stout, which makes me look older. Do you think I am too old?

RED.

Dear Red: My best advice to you is to continue showing this girl some attention, nice little surprises that indicate thoughtfulness—and determination. These are qualities that impress. No, I don't think you are too old—rather just the right age for a girl of eighteen. If being stout makes you look old, why not try to diet and lose some weight?

Doesn't Want to Wait for Him to Ring

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am 17 years old and in love with a boy of 18. I met him at a dance about two months ago and he says he cares for me. He told me he would call me up, but he never does, and he has never asked me for a date. I go out with other boys because I don't want to be staying home every night just waiting for him to phone. How can I get him to ask me out?

PATIENCE.

Dear Patience. It looks to me as if this young man might "have the makings" of a pretty good case of self-esteem. He has told you he cares for you, but never calls you up or asks for a date. You're right in not staying home on the chance he might give you a ring. A little independence is the thing.

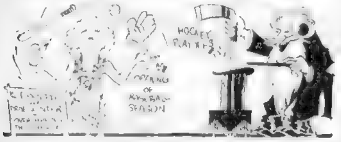
Not Forgetting Tilts for Amateur Titles

This is the week of the Clash of the Season. The gods of Sport put the pastimes in the dice box, shake 'em up and throw out both hockey and baseball. A few years ago if anyone mentioned hockey and baseball the same week one would have thought he was spoofing, Old Deah. But—cross our hearts and hope to die!—if this week in old Boston Town we haven't the Stanley Cup hockey duel and the homecoming baseball game of the Red Sox and Braves with a couple of great wrestling shows tossed in for good measure, not to say anything of a Johnny Indrisano vs. Lou Brouillard ring imbroglio and a big simon-pure scrapfest for national titles. If, after looking over the potpourri the sports chef has made for the Hub gourmets, you don't say Boston is the greatest all fire test sporting town on the map then you don't know your sporting onions. We have enough star sporting attractions here this week to satisfy New York or Chicago for a month.

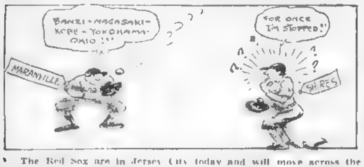


Both of the grunt and groan extravaganzas are charity affairs. Being big charity affairs the rival wrestling trusts are putting forth the best in the house. For Wednesday night's show in the Garden, for which part of the proceeds will be donated to the Children's Sunlight Hospital, Mahout Toots Mondt has billed the champion of his circuit, Jim Londos, against the Masked Marvel. For Thursday night's show at the Arena, for which part of the proceeds will go to Mayor Curley's unemployment fund, Paul Bowser, boss of his own grunt and groan corporation, has trotted out the great Henri DeGlane, champion of the world in this section of the wrestling terrain, against Ed Don George, the fellow who originally toppled Dynamite Gus Sonnenberg off the throne. You all recall what a thriller DeGlane and George put up at last summer's Crosscup-Pishon Post show at Braves Field? None of us will miss the return shindig.

Just to prove that his hat still is in the ring, Charlie Gordon, the Don Quixote who is battling both wrestling trusts, because he wants one of his own, has billed a show for the Mechanics Building on Wednesday and has dug up two Masked Marvels instead of one as featured by the Big Fellers. You gotta hand it to Charlie for being a scrapper. If he dies it'll be with his boots on!

No one who attends the two big grunt and groan spasms will suffer from the ennui. But if you're looking for pure and unadulterated action, why park yourself in the Arena tonight and tomorrow night, and see the simon pures fight it out for junior championships of the little old U. S. A. From Maine to the Great Lakes they come, fiery ambitious youngsters, clerks, farm hands, schoolboys, blacksmiths, collegians, budding doctors, lawyers, writers, eager to win the coveted title or have their blocks knocked off in the attempt. There generally is more action in one round of an amateur fight than there is in 10 rounds among the dollar chasers. The medal and glory scrappers will have the fans standing up in their chairs in the Arena, tonight. It's Olympic Year, y'know. Any youngster licked in the junior title tilts stands little chance of being selected to battle for Uncle Sam in the Olympic ring. You'd imagine you're at a shindig in an old-fashioned Pathron Day in County Wicklow when the gong unleashes the bulldogs of the amateurs, tonight.

It certainly will be good to see Shono and the Red Sox and Bill, Rabbit and the Braves cavorting once more on the home heath. It's going to be a tough job, even with the hockey, wrestling, boxing and everything, to have to wait until Saturday to see, or rather hear, Rabbit Maranville in a passage de gab with Art Shires. Betcha the Rabbit will stump Whataman with some of the lingo he learned on the Japanese tour. If Art only will make his bat talk the fans will forgive him even if The Rabbit does outtalk him. Both Rabbit and Art the Great and all of the Braves have been making their bats talk in the last fortnight and it now looks as if McKechnie would show up at Fenway Park next Saturday with the strongest Boston aggregation in years. Have the Red Sox improved, too? We'll know on Saturday and Sunday.



BANZI - NAGASAKI - KOBE - YOKOHAMA - OHIO !!
FOR ONCE I'M STOPPED!

SHIRES

The Red Sox are in Jersey City today and will move across the Jersey meadows to Newark for games on Wednesday and Thursday. They'll come piling into Boston late Thursday night or early Friday morning for a day's rest before raising the home curtain against the Braves at Fenway Park on Saturday. The Braves are pulling up tepees and hitting the trail North today. They play in Baltimore on Wednesday, in Washington on Thursday and in Newark on Friday, arriving home late Friday night in time to get in a few winks before Saturday's opener at Fenway and Sunday's curtain raiser at Braves Field.

Baseball is here and the Big Fight is treading right on its heels. Soon the voice of the Ballyhoo Bird will be heard over the land bricking, "Sharkey Schmeling!" "Sharkey Schmeling!" The world's heavyweight champion is on the bounding billows bound for the world's wettest Sahara. Max is due to land in New York on Thursday and will open a barnstorming tour in Toronto a week from tonight. Sharkey is keeping in shape with daily exercise and this week will hie himself into New Hampshire to see if the trout are rising in the good old-fashioned way. Long tramps in the Blue Hills of New Hampshire will furnish an ideal foundation for the real siege of training the Squire will launch in May.

Cubs in Fighting Mood for 2d Tilt With Reds

By BILL GRIMES

The Bruin Cubs battle the Rhode Island Reds tomorrow at Providence for possession of the Fontaine Cup and the Rangers and Maple Leafs are scheduled to play the second game of the Stanley Cup series at the Garden on Thursday night.

Interest in hockey, which was expected to fade completely after the elimination of the Bruins, has been revived to such an extent that the city is hockey mad and all the fans are scurrying around trying to secure tickets.

Due to the demand for Ranger-Toronto tickets, Boston has firmly established itself as the greatest of all hockey centers. Although there have been 46 professional games played at the Garden this season the fans are still hungry for hockey.

The Bruin Cubs played to more than 30,000 in two games last week and it is safe to predict those figures will be eclipsed this week if Eddie Powers' crew comes through with a victory in either of the games in Providence.

Cubs Forgot Rough Play in Opener

After their setback on Saturday the Bruin Cubs will be in a belligerent mood tomorrow night in Providence. The first game of the Fontaine Cup series was the cleanest ever played between Boston and Providence. The Cubs paid such strict attention to clean hockey that some of the less courageous Reds went in on the nets fearlessly instead of staying outside as they would have, had the going been rough.

Although the Cubs are by no means out of the running, they have a strenuous assignment on their hands with the next two games scheduled for Providence. The refereeing will be an important factor in the outcome of the games in Providence.

Bill Stewart and Bill Shaver did a fine job on Saturday night but it is understood that Stewart has been assigned to the Ranger-Toronto series and if such is the case, the selection of his substitute should be made with much care.

Leo Larivee Faces Bruce Next Week

One week from tonight, at Mechanics Building, Sam Bruce of Buffalo will fight Leo Larivee in an Argonne A. A. show. The usual prelims will be decided on during the week.

FRENCH STAR IN SAME "FIX"

New York, April 4 (AP)—Within a month charges of professionalism have been levelled at two of Europe's greatest runners, Paavo Nurmi of Finland and Jules Ladoumegue of France, and in all probability neither will be eligible to compete in the Olympics at Los Angeles.

Ladoumegue's name was stricken from the rolls of the French Amateur Athletic Federation on March 4 and yesterday at Berlin the International Amateur Athletic Federation suspended Nurmi from all international competition pending investigation of his amateur status.

Details of the charges against Nurmi never have been divulged. It was said, however, that the evidence against Nurmi was so strong that his suspension was inevitable.

LaDoumegue's case also came before the international body, the French delegation submitting evidence to justify its action in striking his name from the rolls. The charge against LaDoumegue was that he received payment, in disguised form, for competitive appearances.

Nurmi's Case Differs From That of LaDoumegue

Nurmi's case is somewhat different. If the Finnish Association gives him a clean bill of athletic health in its final report, then the International Federation apparently can do nothing but lift his suspension.

LaDoumgue, whose 4.09 1-5 mile last August bettered Nurmi's official record of 4.10 4-10 although it has not yet been accepted by the I. A. A. F. was considered one of Nations competing in the 1932 Olympics will be allowed only three entries in each of the 23 track and field events.

In the earliest of the modern Olympiads 12 men were permitted in each contest. This was cut to six, later reduced to four, as was the case in 1928. And now the maximum is three.

The selection of our team of 69 men will come through one of the most elaborate series of elimination contests ever arranged.

There will be 10 or 12 sectional tryouts. The men finishing first, second and third at these preliminaries then will be eligible to compete in two of the four semifinals.

And under the special new ruling, those touching set high standards in the trial meets won't have to compete in the semifinals.

New England, New York, eastern Pennsylvania, District of Columbia athletes must compete in the Harvard Stadium trials, June 16-17.

The Intercollegiate A. A. A. A. and the National Collegiate track and field championships in Chicago, June 11, also have been designated as semifinals to the Olympics.

World Dash Mark Tied by Toppino

New Orleans, April 4—Emmett Toppino of Loyola startled track fans here by running 100 meters in 10.4 seconds to tie the world's record for the distance. Toppino is one of the prominent Olympic games prospects.

WHALERS WIN THIRD CROWN

St. Louis, April 4—A sturdy soccer club from New Bedford, Mass., outplayed the Stix Baer team of this city here 3 to 2, to take the national championship in the U. S. Soccer Association playoff.

A capacity crowd saw the home club start strongly, and hold the foes in check for a time. But the Whalers were too good, and as their attack gained headway the Stix Baer defense appeared as porous as a worn seive.

In the second half Gonsalves smashed the ball through for the Whalers' first score on a free kick. Frhe, Stix goalie, scored the second New Bedford tally when he bumped the ball through the posts.

The game was the second between the teams, for a week ago they fought to a three all tie. The club left here bound for New Bedford, carrying its third straight national championship.

Cost Rangers Five Bucks a Minute to Practice

New York, April 4 (INS)—It was costing the New York Rangers $5 a minute today to practice at Madison Square Garden for the start of the Stanley Cup finals, hockey's world series, here tomorrow night. For the sum of $300, a sheet of ice was prepared for the Garden rink for one hour's practice.

Although handicapped by the fact that only one game of the series will be played on their home ice, the Rangers are favored to beat Toronto for the world's championship. The Maple Leafs got into the finals by taking an overtime game from the Montreal Maroons at Toronto Saturday night, 3 to 2.

New York, April 4 (INS)—Harvard playing on the Gashouse grounds—My Word!

Yes, mates, it's true. The Crimson's rugby team was scheduled to play the French Sporting Club at the Polo Grounds yesterday, but due to a mixup in the arrangements the contest had to be staged at the field of a gas company in Astoria.

After trailing for 60 minutes, Harvard staged a spectacular rally in the final 10 minutes to win, 10 to 4.

STANLEY CUP HOCKEY SERIES ON TOMORROW

TITLE GAME AT GARDEN THURSDAY

New York, April 4 (AP)—After two weeks of preliminary gestures, and a whole season of preparation, the final series for the Stanley Cup, historic emblem of the world's professional hockey championship, is scheduled to get under way with the Toronto Maple Leafs and New York Rangers as the contestants.

The two [illegible] of the long round of preliminary playoff will play the best three out of five games. The first game will take place at New York tomorrow night, the second at Boston Thursday, and the rest at Toronto beginning Saturday.

There seems to be little doubt that the playoffs have served their purpose in bringing together the National League's best two teams to battle for the cup first donated as an amateur trophy by Lord Stanley of Preston in 1893. In addition to impressive records they both have the playing material in every department to make a champion team and a pair of forward lines that are rivals for the title of hockey's best.

The Rangers finished first by a good margin in the American division gave the Montreal Canadiens a decisive beating and then trailed while Toronto was eliminating first Chicago and then the Montreal Maroons.

The Leafs never have won the Stanley Cup although their predecessors in big league hockey in Toronto, the St. Pats, captured it three times, the last in 1922.

N. E. Athletes Must Try Out at Stadium

New York, April 4 (AP)—The American Olympic track and field committee has come through with a new plan to save Olympic team as [illegible] some money.

Under the new plan, any community in the country will be allowed to conduct a preliminary tryout on making application to the committee.

Athletes placing first, second or third in these tryouts and equaling or surpassing certain arbitrary standards fixed by the committee for each event qualify automatically for the semi-finals at Chicago and Long Beach, Cal., July 8-9 and will not have to run in one of the 11 sectional tryouts already recommended to the general Olympic committee.

One exception was made, however. All athletes in Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New York, New Jersey, eastern Pennsylvania, Maryland and District of Columbia and Porto Rico will be required to compete in the Eastern sectional tryouts at Cambridge, Mass., June 16-17.

The arbitrary standards fixed by the committee were:

100 meters, 10 4-5 seconds; 200, 21 3-5; 400, 49; 800, 1 minute 56 seconds; 1500, 4 minutes; 3000 meters steeplechase, 10:25; 5000 meters, 15:30; 10,000 meters, 32:00.

High jump, 6 feet 3 inches; board jump, 24 feet; pole vault, 13 feet 6 inches; hop, step and jump, 46 feet 8 inches; shot put, 49 feet; discus throw, 145 feet; javelin, 190 feet; hammer, 155 feet; 110 meter hurdles, 15 seconds; 400 meter hurdles, 55 seconds.

No standards were [illegible] for the marathon, 50,000 meter walk, decathlon, 400 meters relay or 1600 meters relay.

HOME FROM THE WARS

Sammy Fuller is nursing a split forehead and other bumps on the face as a result of the go with Jack Berg in New York. Sammy says he was butted on the forehead during the go. "Til we meet again" is Sammy's refrain now.

Sammy Fuller Sitting on Top of the World

By JACK CONWAY

Sammy Fuller was walking on air when he dropped into this office to tell us all about his brilliant bout with Jackie Berg in New York.

He was the happiest I have found him since the night at the Arena when he licked Red Chapman. The big plaster over his left eye did not worry him. Neither did the bruises on his face. He puffed away at a big black cigar. He didn't have a care in the world.

"And the doctors have just told me," said Sammy, "that I can take junior out of the hospital. Poor kid. He's been sick a great deal since he was born, but he's going to get well and enjoy life with me."

I asked Sammy how he got the injury over his left eye.

"It happened in the third round. Berg butted me with his head and ripped open a big gash. Dr. Dorandi of Commonwealth ave., who was in New York for the fight, later took five stitches in the wound.

"It was a hard, tough fight. Let me tell you the story of that alleged low punch in the fifth round. Berg and myself were exchanging furious punches in the center of the ring. I nailed him with a left hook to the pit of the stomach. It was a fair, clean blow and not on Berg's hip as it was later claimed.

"Referee Jack Denning couldn't have seen the punch as he was behind me at the time. One of the judges later said his view was also blocked.

"In the eighth round, I dropped Berg for a count of two.

"I have agreed to meet him again over the 12-round route. I am ready to make the weight for the bout 136 pounds, and give or take a pound. Berg weighed around 140 pounds when he entered the ring the other night."

Dan Carroll was every bit as enthusiastic as Fuller.

"It was the greatest fight of the season in New York," said Dan. "Jimmy Johnston wants the bout right back again, and we're ready to sign.

"We drew $26,000 the other night. The net gate was $22,831 and Fuller's cut, $4964.50."

Eye Injury Prevented Go With Canzoneri

"Nate Lewis," said Carroll, "wanted Sammy for an overweight match with Tony Canzoneri in Chicago. I would have taken it only for Sammy's eye injury. He'll lay off until May when the return Berg bout will take place at the New York Garden.

"New York has gone wild over Sammy. They like his aggressive style and punching power. He'll keep piling in until he gets a little shot at Canzoneri. Then he'll bring the lightweight title back to Boston."

Sammy smiled.

"I've waited a long time to go over in New York," he confided. "I always wanted this chance, and I'm tickled I have made good."

Menlo Park, Cal., April 4 (INS)—Phar Lap, Australian wonder horse now stabled here on a ranch today was recovering from a delicate operation of the hoof.

Dr. Walter Neilsen, veterinarian who accompanied the big red gelding from Australia, said a stone had caused a slight crack in one of Phar Lap's hoofs and it was necessary to operate to prevent an infection.

Mr. Boston

—By JACK CONWAY—

I DON'T know what managers and seconds of wrestlers whisper to mat stars just before an important bout, but I know what I would tell Ed Don George if I were coaching him how to lick Henri DeGlane in their world's heavyweight championship tussle at the Arena on Thursday night.

I would bolt the door of the dressing room, and push Ed into a corner.

Mr. Boston

"You can win back your lost championship, Ed, if you will follow my plan of battle. I know you're dead game, and so won't waste any time telling you to give everything you have in the wrestling line while you are in the ring. I know you would rather be carried to the morgue than quit.

"First, Ed, don't underrate DeGlane. He is a great champion, one of the best wrestlers we have had since Frank Gotch. You know his style and ability as you battled him at Braves Field last summer.

"You lost your head in that match, Ed, and tossed caution to the winds as you struggled to lick the champion.

"If you use a tackle Thursday night, make it a short one. Crowd DeGlane, and when you get an opening nail him. Rough him up at close quarters, and you may pave the way for a winning hold.

"DEGLANE knows wrestling, Ed. He's the best defensive wrestler in the business. He's as cold as ice and will wait for a couple of hours to get the winning opening.

"You cannot use the same methods against DeGlane that enabled you to twice win from Sonnenberg. The old Dynamiter is not as good a defensive wrestler as DeGlane. He wins his bouts because he is blessed with a fierce tackle. Yet he leaves many openings in his defense. You always found them. Sonny is not as quick as DeGlane is to take advantage of a slip made by a rival.

"There are 14,000 persons out there in the Arena who will be rooting for you to win. Other thousands will be listening in to the radio accounts of the bout, and they want to see the title come back to America. Go in there, Ed, and don't disappoint them. Wrestle hard, but don't take reckless chances. Make sure of victory this time. We're all with you, kid. Now do your stuff."

MAYOR JAMES M. CURLEY has a [illegible] to say that Paul Bowser will give 25 per cent of the gross receipts to the Boston Emergency Committee on Unemployment. The Mayor and the rest of the gang from City Hall will occupy ringside seats.

SHONO GREAT AS HANDLER OF PLAYERS

By JOE CASHMAN

New York, April 14—Manager John Collins of the Red Sox is either the best handler of men in baseball, or the most fortunate of pilots in acquiring well-behaved athletes.

Since taking over the management of the club, Shono hasn't had to say a word about rules of [illegible] or hasn't been [illegible] or even say a harsh [illegible] one of his charges for a [illegible].

He [illegible] to wait up at night or be around early in the morning to see that his players retire and arise at a reasonable hour. Most of them are to bed and up before him. Nobody is ever missing at midnight or late for morning practice.

Charles Day, manager of the De Soto Hotel in Savannah, informed Shono that in all his years at the hotel, he had never acted as host to a better behaved crowd than the Sox.

Collins Gives Players Credit for Behavior

Collins gives his players all the credit for their good behavior. He says Fate has dealt kindly with him by supplying him only intelligent, well mannered young men who have enough sense to realize that they must take the best care of themselves to make good in the big leagues.

The rise of the Sox from the cellar last season, for the first time since 1924 was due principally to the players' desire to make good for Shono.

Much stronger Fenway outfits had failed to escape the basement. The '31 gang succeeded because determined to make Collins' debut a success they kept in fine shape and never for a moment lagged or lost heart. Then, when other clubs with more strength but less incentive folded up, they had little trouble moving to the top of the second division.

This year's Fenway outfit has the same spirit.

It will suffer its share of defeats naturally, but it will never be licked because it is not in condition or not trying.

We have never seen a team with a better morale.

Danny MacFayden and Pete Donohue will pitch for the Sox when they go after their seventh straight exhibition victory in the second game of their series with the Jersey City Skeeters this afternoon.

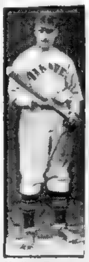
The Sox play the third and final contest with the Skeeters on the morrow. Then, before leaving for Boston they play two games against Newark.

They'll get home Friday morning and rest up for their two game city series with the Braves on Saturday and Sunday.

BRAVES START TRIP HOME

St. Petersburg, Fla., April 4—Brilliantly arrayed in fresh war paint and brandishing sharpened tomahawks, the Braves quit their southern reservation today and headed north, confident of capturing their share of scalps in the 1932 National League battle.

Eight days from now the opening gun will be fired. In the meantime the Tribe stops en route for minor skirmishes to put on the finishing touches for their first league encounter with Brooklyn at Ebbets Field on April 12.



Wally Berger

Chief Bill McKechnie expresses himself as highly hopeful that his Warriors are ready.

"We have had fine weather here in St. Pete," said Bill. "Our weak spots have been strengthened. The Braves are all in condition. We have no injuries. So bring on our foes and we'll see what's what."

Today's Gillette Blades

Far Exceed Most Optimistic Predictions

LAST week we told you today's Gillette blades, recently announced here, had won sensational success. We had never dared hope for the overwhelming surge of public acceptance that followed close on the heels of their introduction. Today we are more astonished than ever. We knew these blades were marvelous—far superior—but we could not anticipate such an enthusiastic reception.

Apparently users of the present blades are unanimous in their opinion that here at last is the ultimate in shaving comfort. "Marvelous; a beautiful blade; I've hoped for a blade like this; I'm sold; finest blade I've ever used"—these are excerpts from written and verbal comments.

The regular Gillette blade is made by a distinctly new and different process. It is far keener—uniform in quality—new in results. Your dealer has it today—in the familiar green package. Buy and try it on our positive money-back guarantee. Give it a thorough test. Then—if you don't agree it gives you shaving comfort you've never enjoyed before—return the package and the dealer will refund the price.

The Gillette Blue Super-Blade

The $2 Kroman De Luxe blade has been withdrawn from production and replaced with the sensational Blue Super-Blade—far superior to the Kroman. You pay only a few cents more for the Blue Blade than for the regular blade and get unmatched shaving comfort. The Blue Blade is of extraordinary quality—without reservation the finest blade ever produced. Colored blue for easy identification—it is contained in a blue package, cellophane wrapped, and is made by a distinctly different process. The Blue Blade is offered in addition to the regular blade.

NEW SETBACK CAUSED BY CONGRESS

By B. C. FORBES

THANKS MAINLY to the crazy conduct of Congress, stocks on the New York Stock Exchange have lost two-and-a-half billions in quoted value after having improved appreciably while Congress was acting co-operatively.

Average prices are now the lowest in a decade.

Security Tax Menace to Millions

The irresponsibles who rebelled against their own chosen leaders pounced upon "Wall Street" in their desperate flopping and floundering to find substitutes for the mild but productive manufacturers' sales tax they ill-advisedly killed. If the Senate doesn't prevent the imposition of the heavy levies proposed on transactions in securities, the effect will not be confined to brokers.

The "know nothing" misrepresentatives in Congress haven't enough vision to see that they will punish, not only brokers and the myriads of employes thrown idle, but the fifteen million or more owners of securities located all over the land. The penalty would fall especially heavily upon the millions of individuals and families whose means do not permit of their buying and selling one hundred shares at a time.

This is simply another example of a tax which would [illegible] its own end; instead of yielding the fat millions glibly estimated by the short-sighted tax leviers, it would drastically reduce dealings, and thus hurt the income derived from other imposts on trading and render investments less readily marketable.

Other taxes agreed upon are regarded as grave handicaps on business, industry and employment.

Two Out of Three Families Own Securities

Again acting under the hallucination that they can soak the rich to any extreme their fancy suggests, the rebels gave the tax screw a vigorous twist on dividends. Unless the Senate undoes the deflationary harm done by the House, dividends, already dwindling heartbreakingly, will sink near the vanishing point.

Our amateurish law-makers apparently imagine that dividends are received only by the rich; they evidently are unaware of the fact that two out of every three families in the country now own securities.

Vets' Bonus Alarms Financial World

To add still more to the alarm created throughout the financial world, Washington revived talk of handing over two more billions of cash to ex-service men. The delightfully childish proposal was voiced that the two thousand millions of dollars could be drawn out of the air without costing anybody anything—except the negligible cost of printing that amount of paper "money." Even though President Hoover has announced emphatically that he would veto additional bonus distributions at this time, the financial and business world is apprehensive.

Auto Dealers Battle for Business

A heroic campaign, unprecedented in extent and aggressiveness, is being launched by the nation's leading motor manufacturers to overcome sales lethargy. Unparalleled values are being offered.

Railroads are showing less unsatisfactory net earnings as a result of wage savings and higher rates.

The oil industry reports some progress. Steel producers had begun to express a modicum of optimism. In several other directions the extraordinary improvement in banking conditions, plus easier money rates, was beginning to have beneficial effect.

Until Congress ceases to create disturbances, however, it would be folly to build hopes of immediate economic and employment improvement.

Fisher Body Exhibit Draws Boys to Auto Show

Motor car exhibits, as a general thing, are attractive mainly to adults; but the General Motors spring showing at the Exhibition Hall, Boston Garden, this week, seems to depart from the rule.

At sight of an unexpectedly large number of boys among the spectators, the visitor at first finds himself wondering what the special attraction can be. He works his way over to the center of juvenile interest and the answer at once becomes plain.

The magnet that is drawing boys to the General Motors Spring Showing is the demonstration of Napoleonic coach-building sponsored by the Boston Evening American and the Fisher Body Craftsman's Guild. It is hither that boy visitors first make their way, and it is here that they seem to spend a large part of their time.

Here, at workbenches stocked with a few simple tools such as saws, clamps, hammers, files and knives, local members of the Fisher Body Craftsman's Guild are busily at work this week shaping the myriad parts for the coach models they will shortly submit in competition for $75,000 in awards. Four university scholarships of four years each, and more than 1100 other awards, ranging from $15 to $100—two of them in each state including trips to Detroit—comprise the glittering goal toward which each young craftsman strives.

Not only the boys at the benches, but most of the youngsters looking on, the visitor quickly learns, are working on models, too. Most of them at their homes. Some of them at school. More than one has brought some especially puzzling part—a wheel or a front gear assembly, or perhaps a fragile wooden body—down to the exhibit to compare notes with the youngsters at the bench.

The exhibit seems to be a sort of clearing house, in fact, for [illegible] their ab[illegible] the bu[illegible] of the coach.

A little more than three months more, and the coaches will be completed—resplendent little carriages in red and gold and French blue. And thousands of boys all over the United States and Canada will be breathlessly awaiting the judging which will culminate in the distribution of $75,000 in awards.

Financial News, Stocks, Bonds and Comment

STATE ST. Hears:

That the nerves of the trading fraternity are worn to a frazzle. No one seems to know just which side of the market to turn to. Uncertainty as to the stock loan situation and recurrent rumors of a rally are deterring short selling. On the other hand, buyers for a turn are timid because they feel Washington cannot be trusted, and at any time the wires are likely to carry the news of prodigal spending.

Historical Resistance

When the Dow-Jones industrials [illegible] was reported here that many previous attempts had been unsuccessful. It again proved to be insurmountable. If all other signs and forecasts are disregarded it is possible to find cheer in studying historical resistance once more. This time it is likely to limit, and probably halt, the down swing.

At the time the upside resistance was noted everyone was cheerful; now that nearly everyone has given up hope, it is clearly discernible. Thus the conditions surrounding the analysis of the near future for stock prices are about the same. Measured on the Dow-Jones industrial index, this resistance lies between 65 and 66. It is the point at which the bear markets of 1918 and 1921 were definitely halted.

First quarter reports are due in the next few days and some are likely to make poor reading. However, some signs of a pickup would quickly overshad[illegible] . . . This, even though they are impressed by the recent action of the common. The company is engaged in all branches of the business. It is one of the largest producers of natural gas. Crude oil produced is mostly from Texas, Oklahoma and Kansas.

TRAFFIC LIGHT FIRST BORNE ON AUTOS

By FRANK H MELOON

Here's an interesting sidelight on an important industry. It appears that no one can be credited with having originated the traffic light. M. Luckiesh, director of the lighting research laboratory of the General Electric Co. at Nela Park, Cleveland, to whom all the other major electrical authorities consulted referred us in our quest for the originator, tells us:

"In the lighting industry no name stands out as the originator. In fact, no name is conspicuously connected with traffic signals. Naturally, traffic control by this means has been a process of evolution. For example, at railway crossings for many years a warning signal was in use. The tail-light of an automobile is also a forerunner of present traffic control signals.

"There were many of these in existence before Dr. Harris devised the first comprehensive system of unified control. This consisted of projections. This system was soon done away with and in many cities there grew up the present automatic traffic control lights.

"I fear that it is impossible to credit anyone with the idea of traffic control by signal lights. However, Dr. Harris is the first one to be connected with a comprehensive system which had a short life."

TODAY'S NEWS OF WALL ST. LEADERS

THERE WAS little in the news of today to influence the market, and the dominating factor continued to be the depressing effect of the proposed increase in stock transfer taxes. The decline in prices in the last few days also touched off stop loss orders and brought about further liquidation.

New Lows Are Set by Several Issues

Break in Auburn carried the issue under the low of 1930, its former bear market bottom. General Motors also went to a new low, as did Chrysler. Virtually all the rails, including N. Y. Central, went to new all-time lows. A contributing factor to the selling was the report that car loadings would show a sharp decline in Wednesday's weekly report.

General Electric Off to Fresh Low

General Electric was another issue to fall to a new low. The coppers went to new bottoms also, led by Anaconda and Kennecott. Western Union slumped 3 points on heavy volume to a record low.

Paramount broke below 6, its former low, despite its report showing earnings of more than $2 a share for last year.

Scale Support for Steel Is Explained

Scale support appearing at times for U. S. Steel is explained in Wall st. by the statement that considerable odd-lot buying appears as the price gets lower. Many of these buyers realize the company may be working into a no-dividend period but remain hopeful for the long pull.

Oils Show Power for Breaking Away

Oils have for some time been showing consistent power to break away from the rest of the list. Standard Oil of New Jersey continues to be the outstanding favorite. It is widely believed action of the "essence" shares, as they call them in the Near East, indicates something of what they might do in a good rising market.

SPECTATOR Says:

Heavy selling such as the market has just experienced would usually suggest the approach of a climax and a good rally. There is nothing normal about this market, however, complicated as things are by the Washington tax situation. The big point still is, even to those who are attracted by the selling price of certain stocks, that there is no incentive to buy them.

Stock Tax

Current reports in Wall Street are that the stock tax boost passed by the House will be cut in half by the Senate.

The wish may be the father to the thought . . . Even an eighth of 1 per cent tax, which the cut would mean, would restrict trading a lot, especially by the professionals . . . Whatever the tax, and one seems likely now, the result is likely to be much wider swings in the market than it has seen in a long time. Short selling restrictions will aggravate this . . .

It is this lack of buying factor which is as much responsible for some of the breaks as anything else. Action of the rails especially indicates few buying orders.

Premiums

High premiums aren't scaring the shorts particularly, especially when stocks like Auburn and Case Threshing, where the charge has been running from one-quarter to more than a half point, have been dropping many times this daily.

Strength in wheat was interesting in view of the belief that the grain is likely to move independently of securities from now on.

Pennsylvania Has Income of $19,545,194

New York, April 4—Net income of the Pennsylvania railroad for 1931 was given in the annual report made public today as $19,545,194, the equivalent of 2.97 per cent of the capital stock or $1.49 a share.

Expenses were reported reduced during the year by nearly $75,000,000, but business declined more than $122,000,000, a drop under the previous year of 21.5 per cent, the report said.

Kelvinator Makes Larger Shipments

Detroit, April 4—Shipments of Kelvinator and Leonard Electric Refrigerators for quarter ended March 31 were substantially ahead of the same quarter in 1931, it was announced today by H. W. Burritt, vice-president in charge of sales.

For the third consecutive month March ran ahead of March last year and total shipments for the first three months show an increase of approximately 10 per cent over the corresponding period of 1931.

Match Issues Off in London Market

London, April 4 (INS)—Rumors that the late Ivar Kreuger's big holdings in the International Match Company had been mortgaged caused a sharp setback in match shares on the London Stock Exchange today.

Swedish Match B lost 10 shillings 7 pence half-penny, Kreuger-Toll B shares dropped 1 shilling 3 pence, and International Match debentures plunged 3 shillings, 9 pence.

Gross, Net Earnings for Rail Increase

New York, Ontario & Western Railway, controlled by the New Haven through ownership of slightly over 50 per cent of the stock, has the distinction of being virtually the only major railroad which in 1931 increased both its gross and net earnings over 1930. Thus far in 1932, also, the improvement is continuing.

Studebaker Sales Have 20.3 P. C. Rise

South Bend, Ind., April 4—"Our passenger car sales in the United States and Canada from Jan. 1 to March 20 increased 20.3 per cent over the same period last year," according to A. R. Erskine, president of The Studebaker Corporation.

STOCKS RALLY IN LAST HOUR IN WALL ST.

New York, April 4—Important stocks rallied in the final hour of trading o nthe New York Stock Exchange today after numerous new lows for the bear cycle had been set.

Taxation fears were generally seen as the cause of the declines, which extended into membership prices.

SEAT BRINGS $83,000.

New York Stock Exchange seat sold today at $83,000, establishing the lowest level since 1924. Earlier in the day two memberships were arranged for transfer at $90,000 and $87,000 respectively. On Saturday a seat sold at $98,000.

As stocks rallied slowly in the last hour today, they reduced and in some instances erased early losses of 1 to 4 points. Closing prices, however, were generally lower.

New York Central and J. I. Case made full recovery while U. S. Steel, American Telephone and American Can halved declines of around two points.

Trading was fairly active until after noon, but offerings then dried up an da moderate amount of short covering ensued. Transactions approximated 1,600,000 shares.

News of a character to influence the market was meagre, but declines in the bond market, and a further slump in the price of stock exchange seats, were presumably unsettling to stocks.

Among shares dropping 2 to more than 4 points to new lows for the bear cycle were Atchison, Union Pacific, Norfolk & Western, Chesapeake Corp., Delaware & Hudson, American Water Works, Pacific Gas & Electric, Western Union, Eastman Kodak, National Biscuit, Loew's, Macy and McKeesport.

Stock exchange seats, which sold as high as $155,000 in March, dropped to the lowest price since 1924 at $83,000. There was a tendency in several quarters to attribute the drop in seat prices to the proposed federal tax on stock transfers.

Stock exchange seats at the lowest price since 1924, with prices of industrial shares around the levels of that year, would not seem unduly low, if it were not for the large increase in the amount of listed stock since that time, and the growth of common stock ownership.

Another factor, of course, is that the number of seats has been increased by 25 per cent.

APRIL PICKUP IS SEEN

What little cheer could be found in Wall Street was attributed largely to the early reports of the public attendance at the special automobile displays late last week throughout the country by General Motors and the Ford Motor Co. Automobile production as estimated for the gatest week, shows a fair gain, largely attributed to Ford and some authorities are predicting a good pickup for the month of April, which should be immediately felt by steel and related industries.

Weekly advices issued by some of the leading investment advisory services at the start of week continued to caution security buyers to keep funds liquid pending further clarification of the federal taxation situation.

In so m e q u arters, too, it was suggested that first quarter earnings reports, to appear in large numbers during the next six weeks, would be disappointing.

On the other hand, some observers felt that a convincing sign of improvement in business might bring a marked change in sentiment. The more hopeful quarters feel that the importance of the improvement in the banking situation is being overlooked.

Brokers' Branch Offices Only 350 Under Peak

New York, April 4 (AP)—Wall Street's stock brokerage community believes it is now thoroughly deflated financially, but wonders how far it should go in reducing its mechanical trading facilities.

It is no secret that many commission houses which are hanging on to expensive offices and extensive wire systems are not earning their overhead costs.

Equipment was expanded in 1929 to take care of 5,000,000-share days as a normal business. More recently, trading has been running around 1,000,000 shares a day.

Despite this shrinkage, however, stock exchange firms maintain some 1300 branch offices throughout the country, a reduction of only about 350 from the peak days of 1929, and about 300 more than in 1928.

Financially, brokers have cleaned house. Their borrowings currently amount to less than 2 per cent of the total value of listed stocks, as against an average of more than 9 per cent during 1928 and 1929. Firms that were unable to clean house have quit. On the whole, Wall Street is confident that an extraordinary liquid condition prevails.

ACTOR TALKING TO HIMSELF

I think that I shall never see
An actor lovelier than me—
Than me whose hungry eyes can't pass
A mirror or a looking glass
Without remaining half the day;
(All actors are, I guess, that way.)
I like the way my clothes I wear,
I like my carriage, like my hair
For which brave men have faced the gales

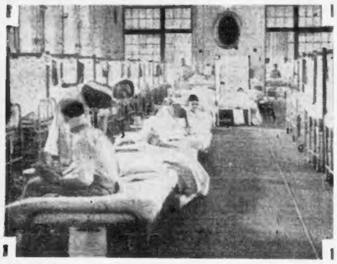
Hospital Needs Instant Aid

Stop Playing Politics With Human Misery!



TOO MANY PATIENTS—AND NURSES—IN ONE WARD

If the members of the legislative Committee on Municipal Finance had the slightest conception of the extraordinary conditions at Boston City Hospital, they never would have rejected Mayor Curley's proposal to enlarge and improve that important institution.

Every sick bed is occupied.

The medical and surgical facilities are overtaxed.

These men and women are ill. And everyone who has had any experience with sickness, knows that comfort, adequate space and mental ease are vitally necessary for their restoration to firm health.

Overcrowding and the annoyances and inconvenience of congestion can mean in the cases of some patients the difference between life and the other.

Moreover, scores upon scores of Boston men and women in ill health, requiring immediate hospital treatment if they are to survive, have been refused admission to Boston City Hospital because there is no room for them.

BEDS CROWD FLOOR SPACE IN WARD T

We have never before in the history of this famous institution experienced such a tragic condition. And the worst is by no means over. The business depression and unemployment, with the nervousness, irritation, anxiety and under-nourishment which ensue, break down the resistance to disease, and we can expect that many more men and women of Boston will be applying to Boston City Hospital for the care they can not receive because Boston City Hospital is jammed beyond capacity.

These solons tell us the money can be found within the city's debt limit to carry on the enlargement of the hospital. That is a heartless, thoughtless and unstatesmanlike excuse.

In ordinary times, yes. But these are not ordinary times. The facilities of the great hospital have been overloaded to an extreme degree which could not have been anticipated.

> "If the members of the Legislature would come here and see the patients in the temporary cots, racked by pain and anguish, they would think differently about it," says Dr. Dowling, the efficient and kindly superintendent.

The Committee on Municipal Finance has made a grievous mistake. It has quibbled over financial technicalities at the expense of suffering men and women. Representatives Kelley of Worcester and Anderson of Boston realize that a mistake has been made because they declined to unite with the other committeemen in the making of it.

The Committee ought to reconsider its unwise and unhumanitarian action. If not, the House and Senate ought to throw this Committee's report into the discard and allow the $2,000,000 outside the debt limit which the city of Boston requires to supply adequate care to its citizens. It is time to stop playing politics with human misery.

New York Day by Day

Diary of a Modern Pepys

NEW YORK, April 4—Diary of a modern Pepys: Early to promenade, coming upon Lorraine Manville Gould wearing the perkiest bonnet ever I saw and told her so. Home, reading an hilarious limerick from Lee Olwell, also a letter from my school fellow, Harry Maxon, whom I hold in high esteem.

Working and in the late afternoon with my wife to the Dudley Field Malones to see their sturdy young son and wore my new boldly striped trousers, very fetching withal. Among notable guests were Sir Hubert and Lady Wilkins, Mayor Walker, Police Commissioner Mulrooney, Miss Margaret Wilson and others.

Dining with Leon and Natalie Gordon at del Pezzio's and gorged on spaghetti as did the Frank Masons, Karl H. Kitchen, Hattie Belle Johnston, Mrs. Davis and Lucy Virginia Long. So spinning small town fables and singing a tournament of old psalters until one of the clock.

Sauntering in the path of a stunning, lithesome lady along the avenue it was interesting to watch her unbashed halt before a window mirror. There she moistened a tiny brush from a vanity, tilted her lashes, drew a crayon across her lips and touched cheeks with chamois of powder. It was engagingly frank and natural. At the next corner she met a gentleman I recognized as her husband. Their marital happiness is one of the deservedly reverential legends, lasting 18 years. I wonder if her cosmetic gestures might not be a minor reason for such happiness.

They were discussing stinging retorts. Someone recalled Ambrose Bierce's reply to a caustic critique by the eminent Brander Matthews. He said: "Professor Matthews is nothing if not right and Professor Matthews is not right." Another was reminded of Herbert Spencer's remark to a whippersnapper who trounced him at billiards. Said he: "Young man, to play billiards as I do is the earmark of a gentleman; to play as you do is evidence of a misspent life."

That turbulent block on West 47th street between Broadway and 6th avenue is known to jobless performers as Dream Alley. Here those who clutched at fame and missed are eddied to curbs and steps of dim lit hotels, a backwash of hopefuls rubbed to a brazen polish by Broadway's eternal grind. And always looking for the "break". Oddly, they do not try to lighten despair with drink. Banded together in a common woe, they have that brand of loyalty often found only among troupers.

Theatrical hotels are curtailing their usual generosity to the profesh. In prosperous times they were friendly fanes for the lay-off or performer "at liberty." Credit was elastic until engagements came. Today there's too much insecurity in the amusement world. Patrons must pay for laundry, meals and incidentals upon receipt or find keyholes plugged. In some inns l'additione is presented every other day.

It occurs to me in a quick flash that ladies in general look exactly alike in those long white ermine wraps—the exception being Irene Bordoni.

Times Square will miss William J. Guard, who with black-thorn cane, stump of cigar and flowing bow tie was a high light in the parade so many years. As the opera's publicity director he added a gentle dignity to a so-often brash calling. Compared to the rowdy Broadway exploitation, his brilliant screeds had the benignancy of an acolyte distributing holy candles. Not rich, he was reputedly the Olidiah Jedudah, a nom de fantasie, under whose pleasant anonymity he disbursed gifts to struggling artists.

Somewhere amid the confusing debris of my desk is a hastily penciled scrawl from Bill Guard scribbled a few weeks before his passing. It ran: "Some evening when out swilling at the taverns drop in for a portion and a swap or so of yarns—Bill."

Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

"River, Keep Away!"

THAT SONG—"River, Keep Away from Mah Door"—driving through the flood lands in Arkansas this winter, I kept thinking of it.

Road like a black ribbon, slipping on and on, smooth as a snake, with the big flood waters whispering on either side.

Big, brown flood waters, rising slow as slow, mumbling, fumbling, with the dirt giving way and the grass roots giving way and the flood waters gulping them down..

Far as you could see—flood water. Swirling slow and sulky, six feet, ten feet deep, far back in the forests of swamp oak and scrub pine, with the honeysuckle vines floating in tangled wreaths—oozing out and out over the cotton fields—

Frightened cabin folk in the flood country praying that.

All the rest of us praying that, too. Standing in our narrow doorways, hugging our snug fireplaces crying:

"River, keep away! Big, dark, cruel, creeping river of experience, keep away from my door! Don't you bring your big flood around here, upsetting everything! Don't you come a-busting into my life, worrying me!

"River of grief—

"River of shock—

"River of pain—

"River of hard knocks—

"River of shame and blame—

"Keep away from my door!

"Don't you take my comfort from me!

"Don't you take my pride from me!

"Nor my dreams, nor my schemes—

"Nor my safety, nor my fun—

"Nor the places and the people that I love—

"Don't you take anything from me, river of experience!

"Don't you come flooding all over me, making me take new chances, think new thoughts, go new places, face new tests.

"Flow past softly, river of experience. Sweeten my days and cool my nights. Bring me pleasure, and ease, and prosperity, if you can.

"BUT WHEN YOU GET TO FLOODING, KEEP AWAY FROM HERE!"

"Keep away! Keep away!" all of us crying that! Yet, maybe, if we'd let the big, strong river of experience come flooding in?

Suppose the flood had really crept into that, little, low cabin where the pickaninnies rolled. What then? Frightened them most to death, of course. But in the end it would have done them a powerful sight of good.

Then they all would have had to move on into a new home, away from the vermin and the sickness and the filth. They would have had to begin life all over again, taking new chances finding new youth.

Floods are bad to look at but good to have, many a time.

Suppose we should let the flood come into our lives, partner?

Let experience come pouring in, washing us out of our smugness, our laziness, our conceit and fear; floating us away into new adventures, new chances; breaking our hearts, maybe, but giving us new hearts in their place?

But we won't let it; not if we can help it!

Even the thought of beginning all over again, facing fresh difficulties, tackling new problems losing the places and the people that we love, makes us huddle close and cry:

"RIVER, KEEP AWAY FROM MY DOOR!"

And then we wonder why "we never get anywhere."

Just Folks

The Job Seeker

He let him sweep the sidewalk and he let him paint a wall.
He might have done those tasks himself, but this man chanced to call.

He heard the bright coins clinking in his pocket as they turned,
And pride was in their music since he knew them truly earned.
For the man who works for money still retains his self-respect.

There are countless thousands like him, weary now of arm and leg,
Who are faced by grim privations and are still too proud to beg.
So it is for them I'm pleading, 'tis not alms but work they ask,
For their own sake and their children's they would welcome any task.

Fall River Sweatshops Shame Our State

Mr. Edwin S. Smith, the new Commissioner of Labor and Industries for Massachusetts, has issued today a terrific indictment of the degrading wages paid to the girl and women employes of certain Fall River manufacturing establishments properly branded as sweatshops.

His investigation has revealed to him that hundreds of these worthy, earnest girls and women are paid wages as low as ten cents an hour and IN ONE CASE AS LOW AS FIVE CENTS AN HOUR.

If these girls and these women work every minute of every one of the forty-eight hours of the working week, their maximum earning would be the miserable pittance of $4.80. A girl thrown upon her own resources CANNOT LIVE UPON THAT AMOUNT, and everybody knows it.

The work of the sweatshop is hard enough and is debilitating enough without imposing upon her the indefensible wage conditions which can induce DESPAIR, THE UNDERMINING OF MORALS AND THE DESTRUCTION OF PHYSICAL HEALTH.

Commissioner Smith examined the earnings of 1616 girls and women in thirteen Fall River plants manufacturing women's underwear, house dresses and children's dresses.

He found that out of all of them 71 per cent are earning less than $10 a week and 97 per cent are earning less than $15 a week.

These factories have come to us from New York and elsewhere under the lure of cheap rentals in the abandoned textile mills and the surplus of unemployed girls and women, thrown out of work and rendered helpless in the domestic market by the discontinuance of those textile mills.

> "These plants," he declares, "are for the most part in charge of men of inferior business calibre, who probably could not survive at all if it were not for their willingness to be entirely ruthless in exploiting labor."

Let us read what Commissioner Smith says further of this degrading condition, because he describes them, as the result of his official investigation, in terms of indignation as serious as ever employed by this newspaper in condemning this blight upon our social structure:

> "These businesses constitute anything but an asset to Fall River. Substandard wages mean unhealthy workers and families. This raises the cost of public care for the community. Moreover, wages which approach, as these do, what might be called starvation level, cut down the money going into the pockets of local shopkeepers and landlords. As a consequence, the community's taxable revenue is decreased.
> "Aside from the toll in human health and happiness which these factories exact by their wage policy, they are a menace to the legitimate manufacturer, who would not stoop to pay such wages. It seems impossible that Massachusetts business men should any longer tolerate this kind of competiton without resorting to drastic means to curb it.
> Governor Winant of New Hampshire, in a speech recently delivered, referred to similar business enterprises in New Hampshire as 'public enemies.' The expression is in no way too strong.
> "The situation represents a challenge to our industrial statesmanship and our civic pride. As long as these plants breed in our midst the citizens of Massachusetts should feel a genuine shame."

The condition is not local to Fall River. Similar conditions are found by Commissioner Smith to have taken root in New Bedford, Lowell, Lawrence and elsewhere. The shame of Massachusetts expands.

Some of our self-satisfied citizens recently urged us to declare an economic boycott upon Japan. It will be interesting to note what they will do with reference to the goods produced here in Massachusetts under such shameful and shameless conditions.

Duty of State to Aid Closed Bank Depositors

The Boston Evening American has had and still has an active concern in the welfare of the depositors of the banks which closed a few months ago.

Approximately $100,000,000 was isolated by these closures.

That is a very large sum, important to the State as a whole, deeply important to the depositors who actually own it.

It is important to the State as a whole because the $100,000,000 is retired from the field of trade, exchange and productivity.

It is important to the depositors because it represents to many of them the savings of a lifetime.

This newspaper has advocated that the Bank Commissioner be allowed to borrow against the assets of these banks. Otherwise he would be obliged to sell these assets on a forced market and on a low-priced market, with the result that the depositors would suffer an enormous loss. Moreover, he would be compelled to foreclose upon the real estate mortgages and many of our people unable to meet their obligations at this time would be compelled to surrender their homes and to put their little business enterprises under the auctioneer's hammer.

Well, we have won part of that victory which has been sought for the depositors, the home owners and the businessmen who had borrowed from the banks. The Legislature has adopted and Governor Ely has signed a law which now enables the Bank Commissioner to borrow against these assets rather than to sell them promptly for any small price they might bring. He can avail himself of any source of loan, including the national Reconstruction Finance Corporation, which was organized in part for this very purpose.

But the end is not in sight. There remains more to be done. The Governor has proposed that the State government shall organize an emergency corporation to perform in this State the functions and purposes which the national organization has essayed for the nation as a whole. By all means, this proposal should be adopted, generously and without delay.

The sums which the national Reconstruction Finance Corporation may loan to Massachusetts will undoubtedly be insufficient to cover the assets of our banks. We must help ourselves. If we elect to rely entirely upon the government assistance, our own banks will be impossible of early liquidation and the savings of the people will be sequestered for years.

The State has a deep obligation in this matter. These banks were operating under charters granted them by the State. They were under periodic examination by the State, and the public had the right to assume their solvency from the reports of their conditions given them by the State's examiners. The Legislature cannot afford to evade its duty in this matter. There are many reasons for public distrust of public officials. The Legislature should not add one more and serious cause for this distrust.
